SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

A Boston elevated electric car crashed into the rear of a four-horse team owned by Warren W. Rawson, Thursday morning on Massachusetts avenue, near Marathon street, Arlington. In the "mix-up" the driver, Michael Burke of Park street, was thrown from the wagon and sustained fracture of three ribs besides other injuries which will without doubt incapacitate him from work for several months. Joseph Quinlan of Beacon street, his helper, was also injured seriously. All of the horses were thrown and more or less injured one of a pair, for which Mr. Rawson recently paid over $500, having two ribs fractured. The wagon which was empty was considerably wrecked. A passenger on the front platform of the car, Mr. Gravenstein of Belknap street, received injuries in the leg. The exact cause of the accident and the responsibility could not be ascertained upon sufficient authority to publish, but it is stated that in crossing the tracks obliquely the men on the rattling wagon probably did not hear the approaching car and the slippery rails made the action of the motorman unavailing when suddenly applying the brakes to avoid collision.

RECEPTION TO PASTOR.

The Dorcas Society of the Arlington line Bible school tendered a reception to their pastor, Rev. A. F. Newcomb, and his wife on Monday evening of last week which was followed by an attractive and pleasing entertainment ending with a collation of chocolate and cake, served by the hospitable members of the enterprising society.

During the evening the pastor and wife were each presented with a Christmas purse in appreciation of their faithful and successful efforts since they have taken up the work of school.

From a mission with an unsteady attendance it has gradually grown into a well organized society, so that a new meetinghouse has become a necessity, and will be a fact in the near future.

Geo. A. Marsh, the leader of the choir, is another one whose work is earning him unstinted praise and deserved esteem. He has given freely of his talents, time and energy in perfecting the choir since its organization last spring. The searching and helpful sermons of the pastor are ably supplemented by the voices of these twenty-five young people. With a chapel on Massachusetts avenue no one can predict too bright a future for this growing society.

A RUNAWAY.

Friday evening W. A. McNeil escorted a hatless lad of 13 to the police station for accommodations after having filled him with a substantial supper. The boy told Officer Irwin a pitiful story of sleeping on "door steps all around" and the recent death of his parents and his apparently truthful story elicited the sympathy of the few who happened to be at headquarters at the time until a sudden contradiction of his own statement. When the officer suggested Concord Reformatory as a possible future home if he was not telling the truth, the young fellow admitting he was "lying" and stated that he had run away from the Stetson Home for Children at Barre. His hat was subsequently found under Mr. McNeil's door step where the lad had evidently tried to crawl under. Upon telephone communication with the Stetson home it was learned that he had run away once before. He was returned the next day.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

On Monday evening, January 5, at the Columbia theatre, Boston theatre goers were given the opportunity of witnessing the initial presentation in America of Luscombe Searle's comic opera, "Bofadil." This presentation, which is made under the direction of Mr. Herman L. Roth of New York, will undoubtedly prove one of the most pretentious productions that has been brought to the Columbia theatre. It is a comic opera, pure and simple, and has none of the specialties, interpolations, nor Tenderloin wit that find refuge in the so called musical comedy of the present day. The lyrics and music are both the work of Luscombe Searle, who is a well known English impresario, who for the past decade has absolutely controlled the theatrical fields of South Africa and Australia.

AMONG THE BOWLERS.

In the Gilt Edge league three teams are now tied for first place,—999th A. A., Commercial, and Charlestown. Arlington Boat Club and Dudley are together in last place. In the individual standing Carter of 999th A. A. leads with Hales of Newtowne second. W. S. Durgin of A. B. C. is 8th, Rugg, 11th and Brooks, 31. Last week A. B. C. defeated B. A. A. 2 out of 3, the scores of both teams and individuals averaging high. Dodge of Arlington was high roller with 587. In the Mystic Valley league Kernwood still holds first place though by a less margin than last week. Towards is second and Arlington Boat Club third. A. S. Littlefield of Calumet is still first in the individual standing with Orne of Kernwood second. Last week A. B. C. lost two matches to Calumet and Charlestown, the former being a roll off of a postponed match. Last night in the Mystic Valley series Arlington was to roll Newtowne at Cambridge and tonight in the Gilt Edge A. B. C. bowls Commercial on their alleys.

ARLINGTON.

W. Warner Doane returned Saturday from a business trip through the South.

Owing to pressure of other matters Brief Histories of Representative Firms will be omitted this week.

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the Baptist Church will meet Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the ladies' parlor.

Mrs. John P. Wyman and Miss Mary Wyman have been visiting in New Haven, Conn.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Edith G. Fowle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Fowle, to Mr. Frederick Michelson of Massachusetts avenue.

The name of Miss H. N. Lockwood of Arlington was in the list of those who sailed last Friday on the Dominion liner Commonwealth for a trip in the Mediterranean.

Miss Susie Crane, formerly of Arlington, but now a teacher in Scranton, Penn., has been spending the holidays with her sister, Mrs. George Allen, of Pelham Terrace.

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the Baptist church, will meet next Saturday afternoon, January 10, with Mrs. Rose Page on Walnut street.

Mrs. Daniel W. Grannan of Massachusetts avenue, accompanied by Mrs. James McLennan of Waltham, passed New Year's day with relatives in Beachmont.

Several parties of young people enjoyed the excellent coasting on Jason and Irving streets on some of those fine evenings last week.

The soprano of the Baptist church, Mrs. Onthank, entertained the members of the choir and the organist, Mr. William E. Wood, at a chafing dish party at her home in Dorchester, on New Year's eve.

This afternoon the officers elect of the Relief Corps connected with Francis Gould Post, G. A. R. will be installed and in the evening officers elect of the post will be installed.

The Samaritan Society of the Universalist church, will hold its annual meeting today in the vestry of the church. Supper served at 6 o'clock. This evening the annual meeting of the parish will be held.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Adelaide Wyman Fillebrown, of Arlington, and Mr. Norman Xavier, of Somerville. Mr. Xavier is well known in Arlington and a prominent member of the Arlington Boat club.

A meeting of the Unitarian Club will be held in the church parlors this evening. After supper, Prof. Geo. H. Bartlett of this town will address the club on "Lessons gleaned from nature and their application to art." Prof. Bartlett is principal of the Massachusetts State Normal Art School.

A delegation from Frances Gould Post, G. A. R. attended the funeral of Thomas S. Brown at Belmont, Friday. Mr. Brown, who was a respected member of the Post, died Wednesday, Dec. 31, after a long and painful illness, from cancer.

Frank N. Bott returned to Arlington on Friday with his bride, formerly Miss Mary Louisa Morrill from St. Louis, where they were married on New Year's eve. For the present, until their own home is ready, they will reside with Mr. Bott's parents at their home on Academy street.

A series of meetings during the "week of prayer" planned by the Baptist churches of Boston and suburbs are being held in the various churches. This evening one of the series will be held in the Arlington Baptist Church. The speakers announced are Rev. W. M. Uprcraft and Miss E. M. MacLaurin. Both are engaged in missionary work.

W. B. Naugler, who is a traveling salesman for the Hershey chocolates, has been assigned to states in the Middle West and will make his headquarters at Pittsburgh, Penn. Mrs. Naugler, who has been prominently connected with social affairs in town and held offices in various societies, has severed all her official connections, preparatory to making her home temporarily in the Smoky City.

Several daily newspapers have contained an article referring to the carrier pigeons which are pets of Miss Mary Emerson, the actress. Miss Emerson is well known in Arlington where she passes parts of her summers with relatives. The article refers to a wager made by Miss Emerson with her manager, Samuel Lewis as to the speed of her pets, "Peace," and "Faithful," and needless to say Miss Emerson won. It is announced that Miss Emerson is to star in a new romantic play next season.

On New Year's night a company of nearly fifty ladies and gentlemen, composed of teachers of the Pleasant street Congregational Sunday school, and members of the Bible class, met at Rev. S. C. Bushnell's on Maple street, and at eight o'clock proceeded to the home of Mr. Myron Taylor, who for the past two years has been the congenial and patient superintendent of this Sunday school. It was a genuine surprise, for the door was opened by Mr. Taylor himself, amid a chorus of New Year's greetings. To show their appreciation of his faithful work, the company presented him with a beautiful crystal clock. Rev. S. C. Bushnell making the presentation speech. Mr. Taylor responded, thanking one and all. A social evening was enjoyed and refreshments served.

ARLINGTON.

Monday afternoon the A. H. S. hockey team defeated Somerville High school in a fast game of hockey on Spy Pond.

Since Christmas there have arrived in Arlington about thirty-three carloads of coal, of which only three were anthracite. Also a few loads of coke.

The engagement is announced of May Sullivan of Cambridge to William Sullivan of Arlington. The young people are in no way related; that is, not yet.

Harold L. Frost of Pleasant street was among the new members admitted to the Massachusetts Horticultural society at its recent meeting.

Prof. James Schouler, L.L.D. who recently resigned the professorship of Boston University law school after a service of 20 years, is a native of Arlington and was educated in the public schools of this town. As a writer of legal works he is widely known.

Miss H. F. R. Moore, teacher of physical culture who has her office in Associates building, returned on Sunday from Detroit, Michigan, where she has been visiting her mother for the past two weeks. She resumed her lessons on Monday.

Robinson & Hendricks, the real estate brokers, Associates building, report the sale for John F. Connolly of a lot of land on Mystic street comprising about 7000 square feet to Mrs. Elizabeth F. Densmore, who buys for improvement.

Miss Roberts, teacher in the High school, is dangerously sick with pneumonia and is confined to her bed. The High school is getting along without a substitute to fill her place at present.

The athletic association of the High school is in conjunction with several of the neighboring high schools, forming a new base-ball league. A meeting of all the managers and captains of the baseball teams was held at Manager Ewart's last week and the initial business was gone through.

Tuesday's Boston Post contained a good likeness of Rev. J. M. Mulcahey and three other Catholic prelates who accompanied him and the Rev. Bishop Hoban of Scranton, Pa., on their visit to Rome and the Vatican.

Half a hundred friends of Miss Annie Fitzpatrick called upon her at her home, 60 Mystic street, Tuesday evening, and presented her with a beautiful ring, it being her fifteenth birthday. Refreshments were served and the jolly party whiled away the hours in games, dancing, singing and instrumental music.

Bethel lodge, I. O. O. F., is making active preparations for the minstrel show and entertainment in Town hall, Jan. 28. If their show of last winter is a criterion we can assure all that the coming event will be a grand success. In the olio will be some special features especially prepared for this show, and the stock of "jokes" will be original and complete. Everybody attending should see that their buttons are all sewed on securely.

Rev. Mr. Uprcraft, who speaks at the Baptist church on Thursday evening, is an unusually able and consecrated missionary and has had perils and persecutions that recall those of St. Paul. He weathered the storm of the Boxers in his field in China, and was stoned and left for dead more than once. He is a live, swift and uplifting speaker, with a large outlook, and amazing power to mass and wield his facts. Those who hear him will be fortunate. At 7:30 Thursday evening.

Last Friday morning the High school team played the Harvard Varsity team on the rink on Holmes Field. A large number of Arlington supporters went with the teams. In the first half Arlington was scored on four times and in the second half held their opponents down to two goals. The game ended with a score of 6 to 0 in favor of Harvard. Though the High school team was beaten it gave Harvard a tough job and showed a much better game against Harvard than many of the surrounding towns. The defense work for Arlington was fine and the team is deservedly proud of the game.

AND THAT PRICE WILL DROP.

From the Fall River News. Let us hope that the supply of coal will keep pace with the longer days that are to come.

Hook—"I told her I loved her from the bottom of my heart."

Nye—"What did she say to that?"

Hook—"She wanted to know if there was not any room at the top."

"I asked the young woman in front of me to remove her big hat so that I could see the stage."

"Did she do it?"

"No, she said if she held her hat in her lap she couldn't see the stage herself."

He died in town last summer. During his last illness his wife nursed him over the telephone from Newport; his doctor treated him by telegram from Bar Harbor, and a letter written from the top of the Alps by his clergyman was read over him at the funeral.

The object of an advertisement is to tell people what you have for sale and how good it is.—Shoe and Leather Facts.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.

Miss Irene Hadley spent a few days last week in Malden.

Mrs. Samantha Nourse spent Christmas week as the guest of her sister in Winchester.

Miss Edith Mann and Ella Averill were guests of friends in Worcester last week.

The public schools resumed their sessions on Monday after a two weeks vacation.

Frank Teman of the Heights has left for Charlotte, S. C., to take charge of a large machine shop at that place.

The Crescent building store, which has been vacant for some weeks, is soon to be occupied by Lawton & Preble.

WHY INDIANS PAINT.
A Legend of the Red Men Explains the Strange Custom.
Once an old Apache Indian when asked the question why his people painted their faces told this little legend:
"Long ago when men were weak and animals were big and strong a chief of the red men who lived in these mountains went out to get a deer, for his people were hungry.
"After walking all day he saw a deer and shot at it but the arrow was turned aside and wounded a mountain lion, which was also after the deer. When the lion felt the sting of the arrow, he jumped up and bounded after the man, who ran for his life.
"He was almost exhausted, and when he felt his strength giving way he fell to the ground, calling on the big bear, who, you know, is the grandfather of men, to save him.
"The big bear heard the call and saw that to save the man he had to act quickly, so he scratched his foot and sprinkled his blood over the man.
"Now, you must know that no animal will eat of the bear or taste of his blood. So when the lion reached the man he smelled the blood and turned away, but as he did so his foot scraped the face of the man, leaving the marks of his claws on the blood smeared face.
"When the man found that he was uninjured, he was so thankful that he left the blood to dry on his face and never washed it off at all, but left it until it peeled off.
"Where the claws of the lion scraped it off there were marks that turned brown in the sun, and where the blood stayed on it was lighter. Now all men paint their faces that way with blood and scrape it off in streaks when they hunt or go to war."

THE CARIBS OF DOMINICA.
Fierce Savages Who Have Dropped Their Man Eating Ways.
A recent colonial report on the Caribs of Dominica is interesting. Very mysterious is the origin of the fierce savages, now almost extinct, who were in possession of the smaller West Indian islands when the first white man burst "into that silent sea." They showed a distinct Mongolian character, and it would be hard to distinguish a Carib infant from a Chinese child. Some twenty years ago a Chinaman who had drifted to Dominica declared the Caribs to be his own people and married a pure bred Carib woman. The resultant child showed no deviation from the native type.
Today they have dropped their man eating ways, but in the sixteenth century they scoured the Spanish main in search of human food, and from Porto Rico alone are said to have taken more than 5,000 men to be eaten. Though Spaniards, Frenchmen, Dutchmen, negroes, or Arrowaks, were all meat to them, yet these Caribs seem to have shown preference for certain nationalities. Davis, for instance, in his "History of the Caribby Islands," tells us that "the Caribbeans have tested of all the nations that frequented them and affirm that the French are the most delicate and the Spaniards are hardest of digestion." Laborde also, in one of his jaunts in St. Vincent, appears to have overtaken on the road a communicative Carib who was beguiling the tedium of his journey by gnawing at the remains of a boiled human foot. This gentleman only ate Arrowaks. "Christians," he said, "give me the bellyache."

Queer Qualification.
The enthusiasm of the thoroughgoing lover of Browning takes some surprising turns. The author of "In a Tuscan Garden" tells a story concerning Dr. Furnival, one of the founders of the Browning society.
A young relative of the Englishwoman in London was looking out at one time for bachelor chambers in a block of flats. The secretary of the company to whom they belonged intimated that the testimony of two householders as to his rent paying capacity would be required. The applicant gave the Englishwoman's name as one and Dr. Furnival for the other.
Dr. Furnival's reply, after a glowing panegyric on the merits of the applicant, wound up by congratulating the company on getting as a tenant a man who "was not only a gentleman and a good fellow, but a member of the Browning society."

It Grows Feeble.
The attraction of a man's character is apt to be outlived, like the attraction of his body, and the power of love grows feeble in its turn, as well as the power to inspire love in others. It is only with a few rare natures that friendship is added to friendship, love to love and the man keeps growing richer in affection—richer, I mean, as a bank may be said to grow rich, both giving and receiving more—after his head is white and his back weary, and he prepares to go down into the dust of death.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Gorki's Early Struggles.
Maxim Gorki, the Russian novelist, had an early career that in many ways recalls the early struggles of Jacob A. Riis. He ran away from home when a lad and for years found life mighty hard grubbing. He worked as a day laborer, a sawyer, a cook and a lighterman. Then he heard that free instruction could be obtained at Kazan, and, having no money to pay for his journey, he walked there, a distance of over 600 miles. Then he found he had a head.

Considerate.
She—Why did you ask Belle to go with us?
He—I saw she was going anyhow, and I didn't wish her to feel mean over it.—Smart Set.

WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.
The Real Donors.
Apropos of the advance in the price of oil, which has gone up nearly 50 percent since the coal strike began seven months ago, it may be noted that Mr. John Rockefeller has given another million dollars to the Chicago university, making an aggregate of $12,000,000 donated by the oil magnate to that institution. Or is it the people, many of them struggling to keep body and soul together in these days of high living and low wages, who have contributed this magnificent sum?

Opium Rooms on Shipboard.
The steamship Siberia which runs between San Francisco and the Philippines and China provides four opium smoking rooms for its Chinese passengers "who can't get along without indulgence in the narcotic." Thus America not only transports its vices to semi-civilized countries and to the islands of the sea, but it is in a fair way to cultivate the bestial habits of those very countries which it invades.

Beer for the Orient.
Milwaukee papers are boasting of the largest shipment of beer ever sent to the Orient, started from the Cream City on December 11th, and consisting of 47 carloads, containing 1,000,000 bottles. This cargo goes to Hongkong and Manila. It is to be evenly divided between the company's depots at Hongkong, and from there it will be distributed in the Philippine islands. The daily that records these enterprising facts predicts that this beverage will no doubt bring a smile to the face of the American soldier boy and cause him to sing "Ship me somewhere east of Suez, Where the best is like the worst, An' there ain't no ten commandments, An' a man can raise a thirst."

The recklessness caused by beer-drinking is of the kind that flings away all the restraints of the ten commandments and makes men forget truth and honor. Instead of boasting of this latest achievement of American enterprise, we should blush to have the world know to what lengths we can go in our traffic with shame and evil.

To W. C. T. U. Members.
At a general officers' meeting held at headquarters in Evanston, Dec. 22, a resolution was passed calling upon the W. C. T. U. unions in the various states which do not have a state prohibitory law, to take immediate steps to secure, through their state legislatures, a law prohibiting saloons within four miles of United States forts, army posts, camps and all premises used for military purposes by the government; and that states having prohibitory laws be urged to give special attention to their strict enforcement in the vicinity of such premises.

Drink vs. Discipline.
The industry of bees is proverbial, their obedience to the queen bee and their submission to the discipline of government well known. It has been demonstrated, however, that, like human beings, they degenerate with the use of alcohol. The experiment has been tried of giving them alcoholized honey, the effect being truly astonishing. Not only did they lose the inborn instinct for work, but they revolted against authority and gave themselves over to idleness and brigandage until banished from the hive by their fellows. Alcohol made veritable anarchists of them. Moral: Banish alcohol if you would banish anarchy; and banish it from the army posts if you would prevent insubordination.

SELECTIONS FROM DIFFERENT WRITERS.
ARRANGED FOR THE ENTERPRISE.

Our dead are ministering angels; they teach us to love, they fill us with tenderness for all that can suffer. These weary hours when sorrow makes us for the time blind and deaf and dumb, have their promise. These hours come in answer to our prayers for nearness to God. It is always our treasure the lightning strikes.—H. B. Stowe.

"Drifting, drifting to lands unknown
From a world of love and care,
Drifting away to a home untied,
And hearts that are waiting there.
O ship sail swiftly, oh waters deep,
Bear us safe to that haven unknown,
Safe to the precious ones that wait
To be forever our own."

"If that change we call death meant the end of life, then indeed might despair settle upon us, but it is only change and separation for the time being, desperately hard and sad, but not forever."

Faith, submission and work sustain, cheer and help so much, that after the first sharpness of a great loss is over we often find a very sweet and precious tie still binds us even more tenderly together than when the visible presence was here.—L. M. Alcott.

"One less at home!
A sense of loss that meets us at the gate;
Within, a place unfilled and desolate;
And far away our coming to await,
One more in heaven."

"One more at home!
That home where separation cannot be,
That home where none are missed eternally,
Kind Father, grant us all a place with Thee,
At home in heaven"

I credit most of my success—the greater part—to advertising. Dr. John Woodbury, N. Y.

Literary Notes

Never did McClure's Magazine begin a new year so auspiciously as with the present January number. Wherever you open it you will read it. If you are looking for a story, just as likely as not before you know it you will find yourself half way through an "article." This will certainly be the case if you begin with the leading article, "The Shame of Minneapolis," by Lincoln Steffens. Ida M. Tarbell's History of Standard Oil also is writing of that same kind, and the third installment of it, which appears in January, "The Oil War of '72," is magnificent. Then there are Mr. Ray Stannard Baker's startling stories of "scabs" in the great coal strike, entitled: "The Right to Work," straightforward, ungarbed accounts of what it cost some of the workers in the coal fields to stick to the work as their conscience bade them. There are also five tip-top short stories. McClure's has its work cut out to live up to the resolutions of its January number.

The Review of Reviews begins a new volume with one of its characteristic numbers—a publication that could never by any possibility be mistaken for any other magazine in the world—128 pages of as full of real "news" as the morning paper and yet as solid and well-considered as the best of the foreign quarterlies. Venezuela is very much at the front at the opening of the new year and the Review not only gives space to a valuable editorial discussion of the British and German claims and the modes of adjustment, but opens its pages to a fuller presentation of the case of the powers against the little South American state, as set forth by Mr. A. Maurice Low, a well-informed Washington journalist. The Review is full of timely information and fully maintains its well-earned reputation.

The January Atlantic opens the New Year with a cheerful editorial welcome as from Number 4 Park street, which wittily sums up past achievements of this typical American magazine, and promises happily for the future. Two prominent features of the number are the initial installments of Arthur Sherburne Hardy's brilliant serial, "His Daughter First, the only novel he has written for many years; and of J. T. Trowbridge's "My Own Story"—his reminiscences of a long and varied career, during which he has seen many men, many cities and many strange events, all of which he writes about in a bright and entertaining manner. Other notable articles are: "The Contribution of the West to American Democracy," by Frederick J. Turner; "The War against Disease" by C. E. A. Winslow; W. J. Henderson's "The Future of Orchestral Music" R. Brimley Johnson's informing letter on England in 1902. Stories and sketches, literary reviews, poetry, and a brilliant Contributor's Club complete a lively and promising New Year's number.

BELMONT.
Miss Maude A. Damon, of Dedham, has been ill for the past two weeks, and unable to attend to her piano pupils in Belmont and Waverley. It is understood she will be able to be at her usual appointments next week. Miss Damon has been suffering from overwork for several months.
Mr. Thomas Stanley Brown, of Cottage street, died Tuesday, Dec. 31, at his home. Mr. Brown was about sixty-two years of age, and has been one of the old residents of Belmont. He was a carpenter and builder, and erected for the town both the Roger Wellington schoolhouse and the Belmont Engine House. He leaves a widow and three daughters, two of whom are Mrs. Greenwood and Mrs. Culver.

Eden Price's house at the corner of Pleasant and Brighton streets, was the location of a two alarm fire on the night of the 29th. The first alarm was rung in from box 18 at about 12 o'clock, and the fire department promptly responded. The Waverley hose wagon, which was built by Mr. Price about fifteen years ago, covered the distance in spite of the heavy and icy condition of the road, in about fifteen minutes. The fire first appeared in the bath room and was confined to the back of the house. The damage was not great. The second alarm was rung in at about three o'clock, and on the reappearance of the department the flames were quickly extinguished.

Among the humorous features of Christmas, noticed by the Boston press, the presentation of a monkey to Councilman Daniel W. Lane of 291 Beacon street, Boston, drew considerable attention. The grotesque gift after surprising several recipients, including Messrs. Benjamin D. Hyde and Homer Goodwin, was finally expressed by Mr. Winthrop Broome, of Belmont, to his home. Here it has found a welcome and is likely to remain, the appreciative children having a fine time with what rather embarrassed the distinguished Bostonians.

WAVERLEY.
Wm. W. Edgar had a satisfactory Christmas business both in potted plants and cut flowers.
Eli V. Jolin left Waverley for Portland, Me., on a business trip last Saturday.

Several cars of soft coal were received by Mr. C. J. McGinnis at his coal yards last week. Anthracite still scarce.

The nurses of the McLean Hospital had a sleighride party to Auburndale Wednesday evening.

Mr. H. H. Russell has provided his grocery store with "green trading stamps," to be given in the course of trade to his customers.

A child, Warren Freeman, was born to Geo. L. Noyes, Jr., Trapelo road last Sunday, the last birth of the old year in Waverley.

Mr. Charles L. Blake's father has been ill the past week at his house on Church Place.

Mrs. Joseph A. Bryant, of Sycamore St. attended a family gathering at Somerville, last week Friday.

Miss Fuller gave a recital of her Waverley pupils in Music at the house of Mr. W. W. Edgar, on Trapelo Road, Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Augusta West's Sunday School class in the Congregational School took a sleigh ride to Lexington, Wednesday afternoon.

P. R. Crocker has added a catering line to his business, and among others, provided the spread for the W. T. A. C. New Year ball, this week.

The Baptist church held an important business meeting last Wednesday evening, at the home of Deacon Amos L. Banks, on White street.

The Waverley Hall corner at the junction of Church street and Trapelo Road, is in a dangerous condition in icy weather. It needs grading and curbing.

Col. E. C. Benton, accompanied by Geo. C. Flett and Joseph H. Cullis, visited Bethesda Lodge, F. A. M., at Brighton, to work the Vermont ritual of the Order, Tuesday evening, Dec. 30.

John Gill has recently added two show cases to his watch making and repairing establishment, and is now carrying an assortment of watches, clocks and other jewelry.

The Congregationalist church held their service preparatory to the communion at the parsonage this week Friday. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the Unitarian church next Sunday.

Mrs. Hudson C. Dymond of Danvers, was in town this week looking after his brother's property on Sycamore street. Mr. Dymond intends to remove before long to the Pacific coast, where his brother has preceded him from Waverley.

Mr. O. M. Dennett, of Dennett, Crane & Blanchard, formerly of Waverley, is referred to in the Boston papers as managing the purchase of the Squire Packing and Provision Company, of Somerville, for the Beef Trust.

The Baptist church held its Sunday school and preaching service at Waverley hall again last Sunday. It is understood that Mr. Fred E. Sherman will retire from the superintendency of the Sunday school which he has held for some time. In the evening Rev. Mr. McLeod preached from Acts 14: 17, to a large congregation.

The Baptist church elected at their annual meeting J. Lawrence Spidle superintendent of the Sunday school, and Alexander Spidle treasurer of the same. A committee was appointed to solicit aid for building a house of worship, of which Amos L. Banks is chairman.

Mr. C. J. McGinnis received Thursday three cars of soft and one of hard coal. The Fitchburg railroad sent one car along to Fitchburg by mistake. Errors in delivery of coal by the railroad are reported as unusually numerous and vexatious. The price of anthracite coal has risen this week from fifty cents to sixty cents a 100-pound bag.

Mr. Robert Kinread, who has been visiting his parents on Sycamore street, returned Monday evening to Moncton, N. B., where he has a position as travelling salesman for the Record Foundry Co., with headquarters principally at Montreal. Mr. Kinread appears to be in excellent health and spirits, and his old friends wish him all success.

The McLean Hospital has three hundred tons of coal on the railroad between Rotterdam and Boston this week and five hundred tons approaching by water. It has taken the most strenuous efforts to keep the supply and demand of an institution that calls for twenty-five tons a day in cold weather, in a state of equilibrium.

F. W. Adams of Trapelo Road, has secured some excellent photographic plates of views in Waverley, including a view of Beaver Brook, the Falls in winter, the lower bridge, and a general view of the buildings of the McLean Hospital, and the Men's Belknap building. They will be on sale at P. R. Crocker's drug store, both mounted and unmounted.

The New Year's eve ball at Waverley hall was attended by a company that filled the floor with dancers who danced the old year out and the new year in. The Tennis club appeared in tennis costume. Phelps orchestra of Cambridge furnished the music and P. R. Crocker of Waverley the refreshments. The floor director was Harry B. Stearns assisted by A. Melville Morrison, Gilbert Burdakin and Frank Stearns. All went merry as a marriage bell.

The third union service of the Congregational and Unitarian churches was held at the Unitarian meeting-house, Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Allen and Rev. Mr. Gilman participating in the opening exercises, and Rev. Mr. Allen preaching the sermon. The address was in Mr. Allen's usual thoughtful and suggestive manner, and appropriate to the closing year. The Congregational choir rendered several selections, accompanied by Mrs. Charles H. Houlihan, the organist of the Unitarian church. The union Sunday school met immediately after the morning service under the joint superintendence of Messrs. Carpenter and Edwards. In the evening the Young People's Religious Union had charge of the service, supported by the Christian Endeavor Society. Frank Stearns led the meeting, and the subject was "Burden Bearing."

Last Monday, Dec. 29, was the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. James Hardy Preston, of Trapelo Road. At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of December 29, 1852, they were joined in marriage by Rev. Mr. Bond, the Baptist minister, at Hillsboro, New Hampshire, the bride being Miss Lucinda Mellen, and both having their home at Hillsboro. Mr. Preston and his wife are not yet aged, being each in the seventy-fourth year. They have three living children—John Stanley, of Waverley, with whom they now reside, Wm. Harmon, of Gloucester, and Mrs. Sophia P. Nelson, of Hillsboro, N. H. They have six living grandchildren, and no great grandchildren. They passed a quiet day, receiving the friends who called with congratulations in the evening, and sharing with them the golden wedding cake.

FIRE AT THE MORSE PLACE.

The large estate on Trapelo road about a mile from Waverley, long known as the "Morse Place," on which the mansion house was burned a few winters ago, was again the scene of a fire on the night after Christmas. The farmer's lodge at the gate, owned by Wm. W. Edgar of Waverley, the present owner of the estate, and occupied by the family of Mr. John Burke, was found to be on fire in the woodshed at the rear of the building by the family just as they retired for the night about 11 o'clock. Alarms were given to the Waltham and also to the Belmont fire department, and both promptly responded, but it was more than a half-hour before a stream could be got upon the burning dwelling, the water being taken from the brook near by. The front of the house and two upper rooms were left standing. The house was insured. The furniture was mostly removed and saved. Mr. Burke's family found shelter at the house of Mr. James W. Baldwin, his employer.

WATERTOWN DISTRICT NURSING ASSOCIATION.

Watertown begins the New Year with a District Nursing Association of her own, and it is hoped, as the occasion may demand, that the townspeople will take advantage of the privilege of using the nurse.

The Association is fortunate in being able to keep Miss Yeaton, who has given great satisfaction, for at least four weeks longer, and she may be found daily, after eight o'clock, at the Business Exchange on Main street. Calls may be received by telephone or in person.

Anyone needing her services on Sunday must telephone directly to the Waltham Training School for Nurses, (Tel. Waltham 120) or leave word at the Exchange before four o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The experience of District Nursing, in our own town, as in neighboring towns, shows that it is wiser that the call of the nurse should have the endorsement of the family physician.

The schedule of prices is the same that has been used in Waltham, and it is published once more in order that everyone may understand.

A call not exceeding an hour	.25
Massage—an hour	1.00
Assisting a doctor in minor surgery	.50
Shampooing	.75
First call in Obstetric case	1.00
All subsequent calls, an hour	.25

—Watertown Enterprise.

The air now comes with eager nip;
The flower no longer thrives;
Good winter, pray postpone your trip
Until the coal arrives.

Customer—"What? You charge five dollars extra for delivering a load of coal?"
Dealer—"Certainly. But then we always send an armed guard along to guarantee safe delivery."

DEACON HARDY'S PARROT
By Cyrus Slocum
Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Deacon Hardy had no more thought of keeping a pet parrot than of installing a pig in the parlor, but he wasn't proof against circumstance. His sister out in Ohio "went and got on her dying bed," as he explained it, and he was sent for to bid her a last farewell. There was only one thing on her mind, and she proceeded to state it. She had owned a parrot for many years, and she wanted to be assured of its future before she closed her eyes. The cat, which would also be left behind, could get along some way, nor did she care what became of her quilt frames and fadrons, but that parrot must find a home with a Christian family.

The brother cheerfully offered his refuge and promised to bring Polly up in the way she should go. When the funeral was over, he started for his home in the east with the big tin cage in tow. The parrot had been silent for a week, and the deacon's heart had warmed toward her. He figured it out that she realized the situation and was doing a proper amount of mourning. The deacon's wife welcomed Polly as a relic of the dear departed and was solicitous that she should feel perfectly at home, when something happened. The bird suddenly found her tongue and cried out:

"What in blank ails this blank crowd anyhow?"

The deacon was hoeing potatoes in his back yard, and when Aunt Mary staggered out to him and told him the awful news he couldn't believe his senses.

"You are a little deaf in your right ear, you know," he finally replied, "and must have got things mixed up. I know that my dear sister Ellen never taught that bird anything but words out of the good book. Let us go in and see."

They entered the kitchen, where Polly was roosting on the back of a chair. As they stood before her she cocked her head and saluted them with:

"Now I lay me down to sleep."
"Didn't I tell you so?" said the deacon as his troubled look was replaced by a smile of relief.

"I thought it was swearing, but I must have been mistaken," reluctantly admitted Aunt Mary. "Well, I'm glad on't. It would be just awful to have a swearing parrot around."

Three days later, as Polly sat on a perch near the gate, Mrs. Simpkins came along on her way to the store and stopped to look at her. She had scarcely come to a halt when she was saluted with:

"Who in blank are you?"

It was a stunning blow, and Mrs. Simpkins felt her head swimming round and round. Before she could recover the bird yelled out:

"Let's have another beer!"

Then Mrs. Simpkins screamed, and Deacon Hardy and his wife rushed out to the gate to see what was the matter. When she repeated Polly's language, or as much of it as she dared, the deacon smiled and replied:

"It's another mistake. You never heard a parrot talk before, and you got his words twisted up. My dear deceased sister told me over and over again that he was a religious bird and that he never said anything but—"

"Honor thy father and thy mother," interrupted Polly.

"Didn't I say so?" exclaimed the deacon as he rubbed his hands together.

"Amen! Amen! Amen!" screamed the bird.

Mrs. Simpkins had to give it up, though as she continued on her way she couldn't help but wonder whether she was growing deaf or absentminded.

Polly had no more surprises that day, but on the next, as the staid and dignified village justice of the peace was passing along of the opposite side of the street, a voice cried out to him:

"Hello, you old villain! What in blank ails you?"

The justice paused and looked around. He was alone on the street. The words could have been addressed to no one else. He crossed over the road and saw Polly on her perch. Just then Deacon Hardy came around the corner of the house with a hoe in his hand.

"There's such a thing as contempt of court!" solemnly observed the justice.

"What's the matter?" asked the deacon.

"Your parrot has called me names and used profane language."

"But she couldn't have. She knows nothing but good words. My dear deceased sister spent nearly all her time for five years in teaching this poor bird to—"

"Brethren and sisters, let us all join in the singing," solemnly announced Polly.

"Any profane language about that?" asked the deacon over the fence.

"If it wasn't her, it was some boy hidden around here," replied the justice. "I guess it was a boy, and I'm sorry I laid it to the parrot. I never thought much of parrots, but I ain't saying that a religious parrot ain't all right."

Polly realized that she had had a narrow escape, and for the next three days she chattered of nothing worse than Moses in the bulrushes and Daniel in the lions' den. She was establishing her reputation on a foundation of rock when Uncle Absalom Flint came along driving a pig. He was closely followed by Aunt Sally Warner and the minister of her church. Just opposite Deacon Hardy's gate the pig tried to bolt, and it took the united efforts of Absalom, the minister and Aunt Sally to prevent it. The three shouted, and the pig squealed, and Deacon Hardy and his wife got out just in time to hear Polly lead off with:

"What in blank is the matter now?"

Five human beings and a hog held their breath.

"Chuck him out! He's a blank loaf er!"

The hog passed on, and the five humans gathered closer together.

"It's profanity!" solemnly whispered the minister.

"It's regular swearin'!" added Aunt Sally.

"He's a cussin' of us!" groaned Absalom.

"It seems so, it seems so, but how can it be?" replied Deacon Hardy. "My dear deceased sister had the bringing up of this bird and—"

"Little children, love one another!" interrupted Polly.

"There—you hear that? That isn't swearing. Sister Ellen wouldn't have had no swearing parrot around her. She labored with this bird day in and day out to—"

"Oh, you go to blank!" said Polly.

The minister and Aunt Sally walked away together shaking their heads, and Absalom went after his pig with grief in his heart. Deacon Hardy and wife looked at each other for a long minute, and then he said:

"It must be profanity."

"Yes, it must be," admitted Aunt Mary.

"Then I must wring his neck and bury him in the back garden. Poor sister Ellen! Ah-um! She must have meant the cat instead of the parrot!"

A Flight of Birds.

A flight of birds changed the history of America under the following circumstances: When Columbus sailed westward over the unknown Atlantic, he expected to reach Zipangu (Japan). After several days' sail from Gomera, one of the Canary islands, he became uneasy at not discovering Zipangu, which, according to his reckoning, should have been 216 nautical miles more to the east. After a long discussion he yielded to the opinion of Martin Alonso Pinzon, the commander of the Pinta, and steered to the southwest. Pinzon was guided in his opinion by a flight of parrots toward the southwest. The effect of this change in his course curiously exemplifies the influence of apparently trivial events in the world's affairs. Had Columbus kept his original route he would have entered the gulf stream, reached the coast of Florida and then probably been carried to Cape Hatteras and Virginia. The result would probably have been to give the present United States a Roman Catholic Spanish population instead of a Protestant English one, a circumstance of immeasurable importance. "Never," wrote Humboldt, "had the flight of birds more important consequences." It may be said to have determined the first settlements on the new continent and its distribution between the Latin and Germanic races.—Exchange.

What's In a Name?

One summer a distinguished member of the French academy rented a cottage in Savoy, and when the time came for his return to Paris he went to say farewell to the owner of the cottage, a prosperous farmer's wife.

"I hope you will write your name in my album before you go," she said.

"With pleasure," he replied, and, taking a pen, he wrote his name in the book.

"Thanks," she said, "but won't you please tell me your profession, so that I can write it after your name?"

"Oh, put down 'landowner,'" he answered.

"But that isn't a profession," she said.

"Well, then, put down 'academician,'" was his answer.

These words seemed to puzzle her, and therefore he asked with a smile, "Don't you know what an academician is?"

"No, not quite," she answered, "but it's such a long word that the profession must be a splendid one."

Not According to Shakespeare.

A negro amateur dramatic society was attempting to give a performance of "Othello." In the scene where Othello demands a handkerchief from Desdemona there was a startling interruption from one of the audience. When the time came for the scene, the negro who was playing the part of Othello bawled out, "Desdemonie, gib me dat han'kerchief!"

No reply.

"Desdemonie, I say gib me dat han'kerchief!"

Still silence.

"Desdemonie, foh de thirld time, gib me dat han'kerchief!"

But she wouldn't do it.

Thereupon an old negro among the spectators, tired of the apparent slowness, spoke up and said, "Ah, wipe yo' nose on yo' cote sleeve, niggah, an' let de show go on!"—New York Tribune.

Phenomena Allied to Lightning.

Subterranean thunders have occasionally been heard preparatory to an aerial eruption. The sea has cast up volumes of water, as if volcanoes were exploding below. The ground has burst open, and floods of water have gushed forth from the sides of hills or from fissures in the rocks. Taking another class of effects, cures have been performed by lightning—gouty men have been enabled to walk freely, epileptic persons have been healed, amaurosis has been removed and rheumatism dispelled by a flash. But one dare not look too closely into the subject of medical electricity nor venture to recommend any one to tempt lightning in the hope of experiencing its curative effects.—Chambers' Journal.

HERE AND THERE.

In the valley of Petruffe, in Luxemburg, Germany, stands the largest single span of any masonry bridge in the world, with a length of 277 feet and a height of 102 feet.

In San Francisco, in 1849, clerks in stores and offices had munificent salaries. Five dollars a day was the smallest stipend even in the custom house, and one Baptist preacher was paid $10,000 a year. Laborers received $1 an hour. A pick or a shovel was worth $10 and a butcher's knife $30. At one time the carpenters, who were getting $12 a day, struck for $16.

The construction of canals was begun in 1825, and by 1832, 400 miles of navigable canals were completed. The opening of the first Ohio canal was accomplished July 4, 1827. On that day the first boat descended from Akron to Cleveland. She was cheered on her passage by thousands of people, who assembled from the adjacent country to witness the novel and interesting sight.

It is announced that American capitalists are to build a railroad across the Andes in Peru. This will entail crossing at 7170 feet above the sea level, but it is believed that by utilizing a pass northwest of Iquitos a road can be constructed on a grade not exceeding 31 percent. The road is designed to open "up" valuable mining interests.

A railway company in England has obtained a verdict for damages to the amount of over $100,000 against the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, whose members struck and by picketing and threats sought to prevent "scabs" taking their places. The United Irish league has also just been mulcted in $27,500 for conspiracy to boycott a certain Mr. O'Keefe and to destroy his business. Evidently in the United Kingdom trades-unions and political combinations are to be held as responsible as incorporated bodies.

Dr. Frederic Temple, archbishop of Canterbury, and primate of all England, died on Tuesday, 23d inst. He was born in 1821. He entered Oxford at the age of 18, and graduated with a double first class before he was 21. In 1858 he became headmaster of Rugby school, and there remained until made bishop of Exeter, in 1869. In 1885 he was translated to the see of London, and in 1896 was made archbishop. Dr. Temple was a man of great intellectual ability and of strong, manly piety. In appearance he was unprepossessing, and in his bearing awkward and undignified. But he was a man of large and tender heart, and his death leaves a large void. The final collapse came while he was speaking in the house of lords, after which he took to his bed, from which he did not rise again.

FORTY YEARS FREE.

It is a fact that is worthy of our consideration that this first day of January, 1903, makes the 40th anniversary of the black man's freedom.

In the autumn of 1862 the papers were full of this much talked of Emancipation Proclamation. Mr. Lincoln had in his own fullness of time issued this great and much hoped for proclamation.

There was much discussion on the subject of freedom to four million slaves. Some thought it too bad to take from the masters their property. People who talked like this were called southern sympathizers. The antislavery society people clapped their hands and said: Good! Good!

It seemed that after the slaves were set at liberty Mr. Lincoln became very much more popular in the public mind. He had done a thing that would stir up the feelings of both north and south. There was in most every mind a trembling anxiety lest the great final triumph might turn in favor of the confederacy and this grand proclamation be of no benefit to the slave. The south had won so many victories in battles previous to this, as they were thought to be the best skilled in war it was feared by many lest our rejoicing would be in vain. We all knew that this proclamation would stir up the southern blood to fight to keep their slaves and fight they did.

This first day of 1903 may be in the history of the colored man of our country, who was once held in bondage, a day to commemorate a freedom so long looked for and prayed for. It was in the minds of the colored people a reality, and talked of as if it was the Lord Jesus coming to them to set them at liberty.

FORESIGHT.

"Hey there! What's your hurry? Are you running for the doctor? Who's sick at your house?"

"Nobody. I'm going to buy a supply of oil to last me a year or two, before the price goes up again. A despatch in this morning's paper says Rockefeller's getting ready to give another million."—Record-Herald.

ANYTHING FOR RELIEF.

From the Newburyport News.

If a free coal bill will relieve the situation then by all means let us have it.

PROPOSED MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Divide the town of Arlington into five voting precincts or districts; increase the board of selectmen to five members, one from each district; abolish the water and sewer commissions, bringing these departments under the direct supervision of the board of selectmen; and abolish the committees of five and twenty-one and make the selectmen directly responsible to the town, is the embodiment of a somewhat lengthy communication advocating several municipal reforms, received by the Enterprise from a prominent and representative citizen too late for publication in its entirety in this issue. As these changes in municipal affairs meet with the approval of the Enterprise as a measure for the general betterment of the conditions existing in the town, and as initiative measures may possibly be taken in the near future to inaugurate the proposed change—if it be considered the voice of the people, the Enterprise will suggest this subject for a symposium in the next issue, and invites communications for or against, only restricting the writers to confine their essays to three hundred words or less. We shall use these essays so far as practicable in the order received by us and continue them indefinitely so long as interest in the matter exists. While the Enterprise will give free expression to all, the position of the Enterprise in this matter will not be affected by anything that may be said in the symposium believing that the people's paper should hew to the line let the chips fall where they may.

ALL NIGHT SERVICE NEEDED.

The nights that some late traveler does not miss the last Winchester and Stoneham car from Arlington Center are few. The fact that the Boston Elevated road runs an hourly service all night, leads many to think that the Winchester line does the same. It is a great annoyance to patrons of the road to be obliged to hire a livery team or take hotel accommodations, and oftentimes both are out of the question. Recently a belated traveler, a man well known at home, financially responsible for the hire of a hundred teams but without the necessary price to pay in advance for a livery team was obliged to telephone to a Winchester livery to come after him as he was unable to pay until he arrived at his home. While it is certain that the travel at this hour is limited to such an extent that the receipts would not pay for the sand used on the track, it is also certain that if the franchise is worth anything to the company it should be worth enough to afford an hourly service through the night as a public accommodation, and it should be up to the citizens of these towns to set the "ball rolling" to secure an hourly service through the night. Only recently, the Enterprise is informed, within one of the lodge rooms a most interesting after supper speech was interrupted by a hasty departure of more than a dozen people in order to take the last car. Public sentiment says there shall be no "last car" but continual hourly service.

COMMENDABLE ACTION.

The commandant of the Boston Navy Yard has been authorized by Secretary Moody to permit vessels to unload coal at the Charlestown docks until further notice. As is well-known, steamers laden with foreign coal have been lying in the harbor unable to find wharf accommodation. As these vessels draw too much water to allow of their unloading at the coal docks ordinarily used, and as, because of the narrowness of the ship channel, lightering is forbidden in the stream, it is a valuable concession to ship-owners and consignees, and at the same time a great boon to the public to have the wharves at the Navy Yard thrown open. Here there is ample depth and good anchorage. The coal will probably be loaded into barges and towed to local and railroad docks. Many steamers bringing coal from England and Wales are expected to arrive during this month.

STRONG AND BRAVE WORDS.

"In the view of the President the relief of the business interests which are being injured solely by the actions of the lawless element of the town is wholly secondary to preservation of law and order, and the assertion of the fundamental principle that this government will not connive at or tolerate an outrage of such a flagrant character."
Strong and brave words, expressive of the wise and righteous judgment of the Chief Executive of the United States. The facts which elicited this statement—a pronouncement for which every true American will be glad and grateful—are as follows:
Mrs. Minnie M. Cox, having served three years as postmaster of the town of Indianola, Miss., under President Harrison was again appointed by President McKinley and has since served nearly six years. Her character is above reproach, and she is highly esteemed by the best people. She is declared by official testimony to be courtous, faithful, competent and honest. Under threats of physical violence by the brutal and lawless element of the town, Mrs. Cox was terrorized into sending in her resignation demanded by those who objected to her solely on the ground of her color! The mayor and sheriff declared that if she refused to resign they could not be answerable for her safety!

The facts were however, communicated to Washington by inspectors and reputable white citizens, and when the post-office remained closed on New Year's Day, the bondsmen of the postmaster telegraphed that no successor to Mrs. Cox had been appointed, closing with the statement "prompt action necessary for relief of business interest."

They got it. The electric wire flashed back the president's message—"postmaster's resignation received but not accepted." They were moreover informed that the office being closed at Indianola, all mail addressed to that office would be forwarded to Greenville.

The President knows that it is not the will of the American people that a good, honest, efficient servant of the public shall be forced to retire under duress and hazard of life, even though the officer be a woman, and a woman of color. All honor to Theodore Roosevelt. Every patriotic and right-minded citizen will endorse his pronouncement:—"This government will not connive at or tolerate an outrage of such a flagrant character."

DEATH OF A NOTED WOMAN.

The death of Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont breaks another link with the past. She was the daughter of Senator Thomas H. Benton, of Missouri, and was married in 1841 to Lieut. (afterwards General) Fremont, senator from California in the early fifties, and first presidential nominee of the Republican party in 1856. Fremont was the first man to raise the stars and stripes on California soil. In his second great western expedition he crossed the prairies, climbed the Rockies, explored the Salt Lake region, made his way to the upper tributaries of the Columbia river, and came down by way of the Pacific coast into California, then Mexican territory, returning to St. Louis in 1844. It was owing to his wife's audacity and resolution that Fremont made this triumphant expedition, for she suppressed an order that would have recalled her husband to Washington, and sent a mounted messenger to him, then at Kaw Landing, now Kansas City, urging him to push across the plains. This he did, crossing the Sierra Nevada on his way back by paths never before trodden by white men.

General Fremont died in July 1890. His widow survived him more than 12 years, being 78 at the time of her death. President McKinley visited her at Los Angeles in 1901.

WORTH THE COST.

We have probably heard the last of Joseph Wilfred Blondin for some time to come. The accused man waived exceptions and a sentence of life imprisonment was pronounced, the penalty appointed for murder in the second degree of which Blondin was convicted. This conviction has cost the counties of Middlesex and Suffolk and the State $25,000. There were 115 witnesses, many of whom were held 12 days. Witness fees alone would represent $1200, and 150 jurors at $3 each and mileage make another $480. It has been an expensive trial, but to execute justice and to maintain truth and to protect society and the individual is worth all and more than the money outlay.

At halfpast two on the morning of January the 2nd, a cablegram was received at the White House dated Jan. 1, 1903, Honolulu, 9:33 p. m. The president sent a courteous response to Governor Dole and the people of Hawaii. This marks the completion of the first section of the submarine cable which links the United States with the islands of the Pacific, and eventually with the continent of Asia. Hawaii is thus brought practically 2000 miles nearer America, and is no longer isolated, but in touch with the whole world. This event is one of those grand and beneficent triumphs of peace, and fittingly inaugurates the New Year. By the next fourth of July it is hoped to have communication extended to Manila.

The Dominion liner "Commonwealth," Capt. McCauley, sailed on Saturday from Boston for the Mediterranean. The great ship will touch at Gibraltar, Genoa, Naples, and other points in the Mediterranean. She carries 256 saloon passengers and 175 in the third cabin. Some distinguished names are on the passenger-list, among them Norman Hapgood and Kirk Munroe, the authors. The Misses Niles, summer residents in Arlington, and the Rev. J. J. Mulcahy, pastor of St. Agnes' church are also among the voyagers bound towards the Orient. Rev. Mr. Mulcahy's neighbors will join with those more closely associated with him in pastoral relations in wishing him a pleasant voyage and a safe return.

FIREMEN'S TURKEY SUPPER.

The members of Hose 3 enjoyed a turkey supper served in Caterer Hardy's most delectable manner at the Central fire station, on New Year's eve, at which Chief Charles Gott of the Arlington Fire Department was the guest of honor. Post prandial speeches were made by Chief Gott, Captain Brooks and Fireman Thos. K. Millett. Later a game of hearts was instituted, the prizes being taken as follows: First, Ed. L. Smith; second, T. K. Millett, booby, Capt. Brooks.

"What did you do to the man who brought an automobile to Crimson Gulch?"
"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "in order to prevent loss o' life we lynched 'im."

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Miss Ethel May Joyce and Mr. Frank Elmer Johnston were united in marriage New Year's eve at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride, 19 Rice street, North Cambridge, Mass., by Rev. F. E. Marble of the North Avenue Baptist Church, Cambridge.

The bride was unattended and was given away by her father, Mr. Walter I. Joyce. A supper followed the ceremony and a reception was given in the evening, to which a large number of friends attended.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Fish, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Livesey, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Young, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Authier, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Mayberry, Mrs. Samuel E. Walker, Mrs. S. D. Joyce, Misses M. G. Johnston, M. E. Donovan, Lottie Worden, Nellie Dillingham, Emma Dillingham, Nellie F. Joyce, Edith M. Walker, Dorcas Authier, Mr. Albert E. Hales, Mr. E. Walter Lindh, Mr. Alfred Joyce, Mr. W. J. Horton, Mr. Roy W. Joyce, Mr. Arthur L. Joyce, Mr. Austin R. Joyce, Mr. Harry W. Parks, Mr. Chester B. Parks, Mr. Geo. E. Wyman.

There were many beautiful presents. A Haviland China dinner set from the firm and employees of Jordan, Lovett and Co., where Miss Joyce has been employed for the last six months.

A silver service from the Messrs. Albert and William Hales, also other china, silverware and furniture.

The bride was dressed in a very becoming gown of light blue silk poplin, trimmed with white satin and chiffon applique. The happy couple departed mid a shower of rice, on their extended wedding tour.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside at 23 Pierce Avenue, Arlington Heights.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

The New Year's party for the Sunday school Wednesday evening was a great success. The children were divided into groups according to age and entertained in different rooms, bean-bag and ping-pong being especially enjoyed.

The following officers have been elected for the Sunday school. Mr. Wendall E. Richardson, superintendent; Mr. Harold L. Frost and Miss Lena Ferrigo, assistants; secretary, Miss Irene Nightingale; treasurer, Frank Ewart; pianists, Miss Alice Upham, Mr. Wm. E. Wood; finance committee, Messrs. Franklin Wyman and F. A. Johnson.

There were four candidates for baptism, all on confession of their faith.

The subject of the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting last Sunday evening was "How to get a fresh start." Service was at 6:30 and Miss Lena Ferrigo was the leader.

SUBURBAN ELECTRICS TRY THROUGH ROUTES.

The Boston Suburban Electric Railway Companies have been making a test of the effect of establishing through routes on its business as compared with that secured for the old short local routes.

It applied this test for four weeks on the line between Lowell and Sullivan Square, now in operation. When this route was opened the company discontinued the through cars between Arlington and Concord, making the line from Bedford Centre to Concord a separate local line. This left it with a direct line between Lowell and Charlestown, and the operation of this during the four weeks in question has shown not only a gain of between 25 per cent. and 30 per cent. in gross earnings, but more than that, through the use of modern equipment and the cutting off of its Concord branch a saving in operating expenses of nearly 50 per cent. has also been secured.

The management is naturally encouraged by this result, and expects to see it work out in the same way in connection with the new through routes from Waltham and Newton that are soon to be put into operation.

ARLINGTON WOMAN'S CLUB.

The club met on New Year's day, and those present enjoyed a rare musical treat. The program was in charge of Mrs. Myra Pond Hemenway, a member of the club, who is a talented pianist, and she was assisted by Miss Lucie A. Tucker, contralto, and Mr. Barthold Silberman, violinist, two artists high up in musical circles. The program was as follows:

Adagio,	Rode
1st Movement-Concerto,	Bach
Mr. Silberman
(a) A Thought	Margaret Lang
(b) Out of the Past
(c) Serenade.	Strauss
Miss Tucker
Kamenoi Ostrow,	Rubenstein

(b) Ah! 'Tis a Dream,	Hawley
(c) The Year's at the Spring.	H. H. Beach
Miss Tucker

After the music tea was served in the banquet hall, in charge of the entertainment committee, Mrs. G. Arthur Swan, Miss Annette Wellington and Mrs. E. P. Stickney. The tables were most attractive in their decorations of red and green, holly being prominently used. A delightful social hour was enjoyed and an opportunity given for the exchange of New Year's greetings between members and friends.

The program for January and February is as follows:

January 16—"The Drama as a Social Force," Mr. Richard Burton. Associates' Hall, 3 p. m.
January 29—Gentlemen's Night. Town Hall, 8 p. m. Readings by Mrs. Waldo Richards.
February 6—Old French Music, Miss Helen A. Brooks. Associates' Hall, 3 p. m.
February 19—Lecture, "Old Plantation Days," Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith. Town Hall, 8 p. m.

GOAT HAIRS.

Golden Rule Lodge, I. O. of U. O. L., will have an installation of officers next Tuesday evening.

Several members of Hiram Lodge attended the public installation of officers and collation of Amicable Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Cambridge, New Year's night.

James S. Richardson, district deputy, and staff from Bethel Lodge, I. O. O. F., installed the officers-elect of Malden Lodge, I. O. O. F., Tuesday evening.

The officers-elect of Circle Lodge, A. O. U. W., will be installed by Deputy Master Workman Kinney of Somerville, on Friday evening of next week.

Thursday evening Jan. 1, the officers elect of Court Wm. E. Russell, Foresters of America were installed by Deputy Grand Chief Ranger Daniel J. Hooley, of Court Pride of Arlington, assisted by Past Chief Ranger Dennis Moynahan, of Court Wm. E. Russell. After the exercises, a fine entertainment was given, to which several of the members contributed and speeches were made by Mr. Hooley and others.

INSTALLATION OF THE REBEKAHS.

The officers-elect of Ida F. Butler Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., were installed on Monday evening, in Odd Fellows Hall, by special installing deputy, Mrs. Annette Mason and suite of Cambridge. Peppard; Chaplain, Mrs. Carrie Hadley; Secretary, Mrs. Nathaniel Whittier; Treasurer, Mrs. Nellie M. Farmer; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Mary Sawyer; Inside Guardian, Mrs. Sadie Austin; Outside Guardian, Mr. William Peppard. A collation was served.

COURT PRIDE OF ARLINGTON.

At the regular meeting of Court Pride of Arlington, No. 190, Foresters of America, held in K. of C. hall, Monday evening, Jan. 5, the following officers were installed by Deputy Grand Chief Ranger M. J. Kelly, assisted by Deputy Grand Chief Ranger Garvin; D. M. Hooley, Chief Ranger; P. J. Melly, Sub-Chief Ranger; J. P. Daly, Treasurer; J. F. Dacey, Financial Secretary; P. J. Hussey, Recording Secretary; T. E. Donovan, Senior Woodward; D. P. McNeil, Junior Woodward; H. A. Dehli, Senior Beedle; R. J. Kelly, Junior Beedle; J. H. Millet, Lecturer. Trustees, T. J. Green, J. M. Daly, William Smith. A pleasing feature of the occasion was the presentation by D. M. Hooley, in behalf of the members of the Court to the Recording Secretary, P. J. Hussey, of a handsome watch charm. During the evening remarks were made by the following Deputy Grand Chief Rangers; M. J. Kelly of Cambridge, J. H. Aylward of Cambridge, and P. J. Garvin of Somerville. Also Chief Ranger Conlin of Court Main, Somerville. Light refreshments were served.

"So you had a successful hunting trip?"
"Eminently successful. We didn't bring back any game, but nobody was shot by any of the other members of the party."

Mrs. Dearborn—"They tell me your cook is an angel."
Mrs. Wabash—"I reckon she is. She tried to light the fire with kerosene this morning."

Farmer's wife—"I wish, Abner, you would kill a chicken for dinner today."
Abner—"O, wait a while. Maybe one of them 'er automobiles will come along."

"John," she said, "there's nothing I enjoy more than reading the last words of great men. I wonder what your last words will be."

"Maria," he replied, "the last word is something I never expect to have."

It is needless to say that the play was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience which greeted our talented townsman and well known reader.

The fire alarm wires were thoroughly tested last week by experts from the Lexington and Boston Railroad, assisted by an expert of the fire department. W. H. Greene who is one of the board of engineers sent five men from the company's employees, and after a careful examination, the wires were found to be all right. Believing that some one tampered with the wire, the board decided to offer a reward.

The E. S. A. held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. James R. Carret, last week, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Mary C. Jackson; vice presidents, Rev. L. D. Cochran of East Lexington, and Mrs. Hannah T. Carret; recording secretary, Francis J. Garrison; corresponding secretary, Dr. Bertha C. Downing; treasurer, Mrs. L. D. Parsons, and the following executive committee, Mrs. Mary W. Ferguson, Dr. F. S. Piper, Miss Theodora Robinson and Albert S. Parsons. It was decided to name two women as candidates for the school board at the next election, and to make arrangements in the spring to increase the registration of women. A special meeting of the association will be held in January to hear the report of several committees.

The annual meeting of the Hancock Congregational church was held Wednesday evening, Dec. 31. The attendance was very large and an excellent supper was served in the supper room, which was enjoyed by a goodly number. When justice had been done to the spread, the reports of the year's work were read, and then followed the pastor's annual message. At the business part of the meeting the following officers were elected: Clerk, James P. Prince; treasurer, Dr. N. H. Merriam; deacon, George W. Spaulding, deaconess, Mrs. A. C. Washburn. James P. Prince was elected Supt. of the Sunday school. The music committee for the year consists of B. C. Whitcher, George H. Emery and Jonathan I. Buck. The treasurer's report of the year's benevolences showed that over fifteen hundred dollars had been expended.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.

Wednesday afternoon the Sunshine club met at Mrs. T. A. Jernegan's of Appleton street. Mrs. Gertrude Meggett the state president of the Sunshine club addressed the meeting after which the regular game of whist was participated in.

Mrs. McKeene, who spent the past year at the Belvidere, died in Cambridge at Mr. H. B. Babbitt's residence Monday. Though she had been in failing health for quite awhile her death was very unexpected.

The coasting was fine here for several days and many of the young people took full advantage of it. There were several large parties out with double-runners in the evenings and only one serious accident has been reported.

Mrs. Frederick E. Ayer, who went to California for her health, suddenly decided to come back, and arrives at the Heights this week. She will be located here with her husband for the rest of the winter.

A horse ran away with a sleigh from Mr. Gardiner's house on Wollaston avenue one night last week. The horse brought up at Law's livery stable in Arlington with nothing but slight damage to one side of the sleigh.

On Thursday, Jan. 1, 1903, a quiet and very pretty wedding was solemnized by the Rev. George W. McCombe, pastor of the Baptist church, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Tufts, 1263 Massachusetts avenue, when George Albert Fiske and Lottie Emma Flint, both of Mansfield, were united in matrimony. A reception followed and Caterer Hardy served a dainty repast to the wedding guests.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

Do not let rubbish of any kind lie underneath the trees. It harbors vermin. A yard or lawn always looks barren without some ornamental trees and shrubs.

As an apple or pear orchard will last a lifetime, particular care must be taken in the selection of varieties.

If currants and gooseberries are pruned in tree form, they will bear larger and finer fruit. Prune every year.

To have a good garden the land must be kept rich by liberal use of manure. During the winter is the best time to apply it.

Nearly all house plants will be benefited by having the blossoms that appear immediately after planting in pots pruned off. Let the plant get well established before flowering.

The rose is a hearty feeder and will therefore bear annual manuring, but only well rotted and thoroughly fined manure should be used, taking care to work it well into the soil early in the winter.

People Who Cannot Make Fires.
The Papuans of the Malay coast of New Guinea are still in the most primitive state. They are wholly unacquainted with metals and make their weapons of stone, bones and wood. They do not know how to start a fire, though fire is used among them. When a Russian asked them how they made a fire, they regarded it as very amusing and answered that when a person's fire went out he got some of a neighbor, and if all the fires in the village should go out they would get it from the next village. Their fathers and grandfathers had told them that they remembered a time or had heard from their ancestors that there was a time when fire was not known and everything was eaten raw.

A Too Common Attitude.
A small girl who had just begun to attend school brought home a pumpkin seed and told her mother that the teacher said that, although the seed was white, the pumpkin would be yellow.
"And what will the color of the vines be?" asked the mother.
The little girl replied that the teacher had not taught her that.
"But," said her mother, "you know, dear, for we have pumpkin vines in our garden."
"Of course I do, but we ain't expected to know anything until we are taught."
—Youth's Companion.

First Ohio Canal.
The construction of canals was begun in 1825, and by 1832 400 miles of navigable canals were completed. The opening of the first Ohio canal was accomplished July 4, 1827. On that day the first boat descended from Akron to Cleveland. She was cheered on her passage by thousands of people, who assembled from the adjacent country to witness the novel and interesting sight.

Gifted Conversationalist.
"She has wonderful conversational powers," said Miss Cayenne.
"But she doesn't talk a great deal."
"No; I never knew any one who showed such discretion in the selection of things to be left unsaid."—Washington Star.

A man can never become a true gentleman in manner until he has become a true gentleman at heart.—Dickens.

EAST LEXINGTON.

Mrs. W. S. Cook spent the holidays with friends in Boston.

John O'Neil is out again and is glad to bid goodbye to a severe attack of rheumatism.

Mrs. B. C. Meek of Fern street entertained friends from the west this week.

Francis Daly of Watertown street, has given up the produce business and left for Florida.

Miss Mary Roach and Miss Alice Donovan are the guests of Miss Mary Donovan of Fern street.

Mrs. Howard N. Brackett of Revere, called on East Lexington friends, during the holidays.

Calvin E. Eaton and wife of Massachusetts Avenue, are paying a visit to their son at Field's corner.

Mrs. G. L. Pierce has almost entirely recovered from his recent illness, a cause of much joy to her friends.

Mrs. Wesley Sims had a guest last week Miss McPhee of Waverley. Mr. Sims, who is working in Foxboro, also spent the holidays with his family.

The many friends of Francis Douglass are pleased to know that she has recovered from an operation on her throat.

Thomas Whiting and his steam wood sawing machine, are welcome and familiar sights about town, and the saw finds plenty of work to do.

William Chase, one of East Lexington's best known citizens, has retired, and can now enjoy seeing other mortals struggle for a living.

The committee who have charge of the arrangements for the firemen's dance to be held in Village hall on Jan. 15, report that all indications point to a first class time.

"Medford Monarch," a blooded Scotch collie, owned by Miss May Snelling, took three prizes at a recent dog show held in Lawrence.

Mrs. L. A. Austin has the sympathy of many friends on account of the death of her grandfather, Samuel Tufts, at Woburn last week. The deceased was known as a kindly and courteous gentleman, and made friends of all whom he met, and borne his four score and three years with quiet dignity.

Rev. L. Cochrane preached last Sunday morning to a large congregation his subject being: "Forward." "The Opportunities of New Years" was the subject for an interesting talk in the evening by Claudine Foster, and Edna Locke.

The funeral of Mrs. E. J. Collins who had been ailing for some time previous to her death, among the New Hampshire hills, was held from the residence of her mother on Fern street last Saturday, the remains being taken to Arlington cemetery. Besides her husband the deceased leaves a little girl scarcely 8 months old, and the family have the sympathy of many friends.

Clarence Schnetzer entertained a party of friends at his home on Appleton street Wednesday evening, the occasion being his eighteenth birthday anniversary. His parents presented him with a beautiful watch, and his friends remembered the occasion with a set of military brushes. Games were indulged in, dainty refreshments served and the party broke up at a late hour.

The gale of Saturday morning paid its respects to East Lexington, as well as other portions of the town. About a dozen trees that lined a well built culvert on the estate of Mrs. Dana, were uprooted, and tore out a large part of the wall of the culvert when they fell.

A chimney on the house of S. M. Lawrence on Pleasant street, was also blown down, and a number of windows broken in the houses at the east end of the town.

The high wind of last Saturday morning did considerable damage on the hill. It smashed a window in Postmaster Blanchard's house; blew the cupola off Mr. M. L. Severy's barn on Park avenue and broke it beyond repair; broke many boughs on shade trees in different parts of the town; and blew off about ten feet from the top of the main chimney of Dr. Ring's sanatorium. This chimney in falling demolished two balconies on the outside of the house. The wind also stripped off all the boards from the roof of Dr. Ring's new house, which is in the process of construction, and strewed them all about the place.

While coasting on Wollaston avenue about noon on Wednesday little Edward Jukes, son of Mr. Charles H. Jukes of Westminster avenue, met with a severe and painful accident. Mr. E. I. Mackenzie, the station agent, happened to be passing in his sleigh, and either did not see Edward or the little fellow was unable to manage his sled for he crashed into the vehicle striking his forehead on the runners in some way, inflicting a severe and dangerous cut over the right eye. He was carried into Dr. Meikle's office on Massachusetts avenue where it was necessary to administer ether and take a number of stitches, after which he was carried to his home. This ought to be a warning to both old and young for it is surely a dangerous place for coasting, the hill being so steep and so many people and teams pass on Park and Massachusetts avenues.

Among the Churches

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

At the morning service at the Pleasant street Congregational church the following program was rendered: Organ, Prelude, Thomas; anthem, "Send out thy Light," Gounod; duet for contralto and bass, "Rejoice in the Lord," Schnecker; anthem, "Happy are we," Gounod; offertory, "Hymn to St. Cecilia," Gounod; postlude, Salome. The topic of the Christian Endeavor meeting on Sunday evening was "How to get a fresh start." There was no leader but everyone helped to make it interesting. Communion was celebrated at four o'clock Sunday.

PARK AVENUE CHURCH.

The regular Sunday evening meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society, took place last Sunday at seven o'clock, instead of half past six as heretofore. This changed time of meeting will continue until further notice. The subject for last Sunday night was "How to get a fresh start" and Miss Webber of Bedford led a large meeting. It was the regular monthly consecration meeting as this meeting has been changed from the last Sunday in each month to the first. Next Sunday Mr. Taylor will lead, the topic being "Bringing others to Christ."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS BAPTIST CHURCH.

Last Sunday Rev. Geo. W. McCombe preached a New Year's sermon, his text being "New Things." In the evening the text was, "What is that to thee, follow thou me." The music at these meetings was unusually good, the young people blending their voices together in harmony.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held Sunday at six o'clock, topic, "How to get a fresh start," the president led, this being a consecration meeting and a very interesting as well as helpful one.

Last Friday evening prayer meeting was a Covenant meeting, when Rev. Mr. McCombe made a short address on "Terms of the Covenant," the first in a series of exposition on the covenant.

Next Friday evening it is to be a motto meeting, all present will be expected to give a motto for the coming year.

There has been a special service added which takes the form of a morning prayer service, every Sunday morning at 10.20 a. m. Arrangements are being made for next week which will be observed as "Week of Prayer." There will be a meeting every evening at the church.

There was a meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. committees at Mrs. Kings on Westminster avenue last evening, (Wednesday.)

PLEASANT STREET CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Monday afternoon Mr. Yonkins, superintendent of the North End Mission, Boston, addressed the meeting of the Bradshaw Missionary Association. Seven children from the Mount Hope Home were present with the matron, Miss Cann. A number of the children spoke and sang. Mr. Yonkers said the children who are admitted to this home are not from the slums, but from good homes as a rule, where the parents have either been unfortunate or dead. The home is supported entirely by donations and at present there are forty enrolled, children ranging from two to twelve years. The Young Woman's Home at Worcester Square, is also included in this Mission, and here young women are taught to live useful, christian lives. Mr. Yonkers spoke of different instances where girls had gone from this home their character so greatly changed it was impossible to realize. At the close of his address, refreshments were served by Misses Rolfe and Clifford, Mrs. Gardner S. Crushman and Mrs. Greene.

The musical program for Sunday, Jan. 11, 10.45 a. m., will be as follows:—Organ. Improvisation in F. Clark; Anthem. "Another Six Days work is done," Schnecker; Offertory. Melody, Guilmant; Tenor Solo. "Light as the Heart Desireth," Allisen.

Anthem. "Hark, hark, my Soul, Shelley Postlude. Final from Third Symphony, Mendelssohn.

There is to be a sociable and supper at the church next Tuesday at six o'clock, tickets 25 cents.

Anxious wife—"What do you think of my husband's case? Is it serious?"

Physician—"O, he'll pull through all right. What he needs is rest, so I have prescribed an opiate."

Anxious wife—"How often shall I give it to him?"

Physician—"Don't give it to him at all; take it yourself."

"I always feel at loss in a tunnel," remarked the tourist from Kentucky.

"Why so?" asked his fellow-passenger. "Why, when I hear a suspicious 'smack' I don't know for the life of me whether it is a young man kissing his girl or some one opening a flask."

MISS MCCrackEN'S WORK.

The articles of Miss Elizabeth McCracken of Jason street, which have already been referred to in this paper, dwelling upon the influence plays and books exert on humble folks in our great cities have given rise to considerable criticism and some controversy. The Boston Herald in a recent issue contained a long editorial referring to a previous criticism in another Boston newspaper. The writer had taken Miss McCracken to task on the ground that her papers implied a betrayal of confidences.

The Herald article well puts it in the following lines:

"Should it not be the spirit in which the writing is done which determines whether the work is or is not offensive. The lesson of Miss McCracken's articles, the play and the book are vital forces in life and have power as such to make or to mar human souls is undoubtedly a lesson we may all be the better for knowing. . . . When a newspaper reporter runs down to a settlement tea for the express purpose of headlining in a 'yellow' the spectacle of 'carriages and silk gowns in the slums,' there is no question that harm comes of it; but when a woman of fine sensibilities describes as sympathetically as Miss McCracken has done bits of life as she has seen it while laboring sweetly and patiently (though of this she says not a word) for the good of those she has come to know through the settlement, one cannot but paraphrase the words of the gospel to remark: 'Let him who never passed along a friend's experience or word of wisdom or flash of insight cast the first stone!'"

THE ASSEMBLY.

Third in the series of popular dancing parties under the able management of Miss Alice Homer took place Friday evening in Association hall. As at all of these dances Custer's orchestra furnished the music. Owing to Miss Homer wisely limiting the entrance to one, the order of dances was much longer than usual, something about seventeen numbers.

The gowns worn by the ladies present were in many cases most elaborate and all in all it was a very dressy affair. The matrons receiving were: Mrs. William G. Rice and Mrs. Frank Noyes both most becomingly attired. The ushers were: Messrs. Robert Bacon, Frank Noyes, Roger Homer and Norman Cushman. Coming as it did during the holiday recess many of the college students were present. Quite a large number of older persons enjoyed watching the dancing from convenient seats in the balcony.

Among those present were: Misses Margaret Coleman, Alice Reed, Annie Wood, Florence Hicks, Edna Pierce, Helen Taft, Clara Taft, Lillian Peck, Theresa Hardy, Emma Puffer, Josephine Legg, Ida Fletcher, Florence Hill, Nancy Swift, Miss Swift, Margaret Turner, Marion Churchill, Fredrika Churchill, Marion Shepherd, Theres Norton, Constance Yeames, Miss Cochran, Miss Lowe, Marion Foster.

Messrs. Harold Rice, Edgar Parker, William James, Roger Homer, Mr. Beebe, Mr. Horne, Robert Hernandez, Frank Buhlert, Frank Elwell, Allan Taft, Gilman Churchill, Harold Yeames, Oswald Yeames, Frank Fitzpatrick, Jere Colman, Jr., George Gray, Clifford Gray, Louis Morse, Leon Smith, Howard Turner, Wilbur McLean, Norman Cushman, Mr. Smith, Warren Freeman, Ernest Freeman, Fred Viets, Ernest Rankin, Dwight Prescott, Winthrop Pattee, William Hutton, Gaylord Brackett, Gray Homer.

The next assembly takes place the Friday evening preceding Washington's birthday, February 20.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

A daughter arrayed against her father in stock speculation and gambling, because of his opposition to her love affairs, is certainly a very ingenious and novel plot for a melodrama. Such is the plot of "A Gambler's Daughter" which comes to the Boston Grand Opera House next week. Matinees are to be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, as usual.

NEW YEAR FESTIVAL.

The annual New Year's festival of the First Parish (Unitarian) church was held Friday afternoon and evening Jan. 2, to avoid conflicting date with the Woman's Club entertainment on the first. At four o'clock the children assembled in the vestry and mingled in free and unrestrained amusements until the supper at 6 o'clock.

After the supper the usual awards of books were made to the pupils of the Sunday school for good attendance. Those present every Sunday were: Eleanor Russell, Ruth Pettengill, Rachel Norton, Clifford Gray, Warren Peirce, Clara Livingstone, Francis McKay, Erminie Ware, Amy Schwamb, Mrs. H. F. Martin, Pauline Russell, Philip Dunbar, Roger Dunbar, Jack Hutchinson, Percy Marston, Eleanor Homer, Arthur Marston, Rena Gray.

Those absent but one Sunday were Helen Pettengill, James Robinson, Alexander Livingstone, Mildred Osgood, Forrest Osgood, Dorothy Homer, Myra Wood, Mrs. Worthen, George Gray, Mrs. Norton, John W. Gowen, Mrs. Osgood, Agatha Smith, Marjorie Wood, Evelyn Towne, Edith Whittemore.

In the evening in the audience room the Rev. Henry D. Spaulding of Brookline, delivered a very interesting lecture upon "The Christ Child" illustrated with stereoscopic reproductions of paintings by the old masters, which was attentively listened to by the adult portion of the large audience.

For a Happy Day

By M. M'C. WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1902, by the
S. S. McClure Company

Out in the garden Philomena sang so sweet and high it was like the scent of the clove pinks. They stretched in a matted mass all up and down the old fashioned borders. The garden was big, and a wide, weathered gray house brooded beside it. Time was when the Tryon house had been the finest and most hospitable in all the countryside. In the day of broken fortunes it still kept an aroma of cheery good will.

Lusty hundred leaf roses grew behind the bordering pinks. Philomena was snipping them ruthlessly, cutting them without stems and dropping them in her apron. It bulged ridiculously with the mass of bloom, but she kept crowding in clipped pinky white petals, pretending to be conscious of nothing but her work.

Somebody had come up behind her, a tall, young fellow, supple and merry eyed. He undid the apron strings delicately, gathered the band in his hands, stretching daring arms about her waist, and said: "Stop slaying your thousands, Phil! One rose ought to love her sisters too well for wholesale murder."

Philomena laid from his clasp, dexterously slipping the huddled apron within his hands. "If I were a rose, I had rather be clipped for potpourri than be left to waste and wither," she said with a delicious upward tilt of the chin.

"Being interpreted, that means you have not given up a stage career," Arthur Wayne said, catching her hand. "Phil, Phil," he went on, "you must give it up. I cannot bear to think of my rose, my rose of all the world, withering, fading, in the glare of the footlights."

"Stop! We have gone over all that!" Philomena said imperiously. "I tell you, I must go. It is past bearing, the way things are now. Oh, I know my aunts would not starve. They've a roof over their heads, and Uncle John—but I cannot speak of him. What I cannot bear longer is to see them pinched, unhappy, lacking the little comforts that mean so much in age, feeling themselves dependent."

"You know our home would be theirs," Arthur interrupted. Phil gave him a reproachful look. "You won't understand," she said. "All their lives they have been somebody, gentlemen, able to hold up their heads. Gentlewomen hate charity. They risked money and lost it, against uncle's advice, for my sake. Now, when I am told I have a fortune in my throat, I must take care of them, even if it breaks my heart."

The last word was under breath. Wayne made to draw her to him, but a brisk, bustling voice behind them said: "So ho! Very pretty! Upon my word, very pretty! Are we rehearsing for Strephon and Chloe?" Then without waiting answer the newcomer ran on: "Miss Tryon, be ready for the early train tomorrow. I've a letter from Franzoni. He will try your voice, provided you come to him by 10 o'clock in the morning."

"I shall go with you," Arthur said, openly taking Phil in his arms. "I said you must choose, dear. Let me take it back. If you will, let me follow—everywhere."

"No, no! I will not let you spoil your life!" Phil protested, but he held her fast, saying, as he looked Music Master Graham square in the eye: "Philomena is my promised wife and not by a fair weather promise. Wherever you may take her I shall go too."

Graham's eyes were quizzical, yet not unkind. "That's as you please, young man," he said, waving his hand up and down. "But if you'll heed a friendly word, stay behind, at least at first. You see, you'd be so patently, so palpably romantic you'd be set down, not as a fact, but a press agent's fake. The voice there," nodding toward Philomena, "is so pure, so golden, so rarely true it needs to be kept high, not vulgarized. I give you my word the roaring lions supposed to haunt stage doors are really no more than yelping curly poodles. They tag after and fawn upon you for an encouraging look or word, come to the whistle and tumble over themselves to follow a finger even half lifted. But as for danger, my friend, even an unconscious look scares them. Miss Tryon has only to be herself in order to be always and everywhere perfectly safe."

"Notwithstanding I shall go," Arthur said obstinately.

Graham shrugged his shoulders. Miss Tryon, the elder of the aunts, came tripping between the borders, her delicately wrinkled face exhaling a spiritual fragrance like the scent of dried rose leaves. "Come in a day of you," she said eagerly. "There's a peddler on the piazza, an elderly man, and he looks so tired, carrying that heavy pack. Such lovely things! Yes," deprecatingly to Philomena, "Martha and I let him show them, but indeed it was after we had told him we could not buy. I thought, though, maybe, Arthur—only his mother gets so much in the city. But really there is the loveliest length of brocade, almost exactly like my grandmother's second day's silk!"

As she spoke she had huddled the other three in front of her toward the house, much as she would have marshaled fowls a trifle unruly.

At the piazza steps Philomena sat down, but the men both fell to examining the peddler's wares. Graham, indeed, almost instantly caught up the length of brocade, crying as he threw it over Philomena's shoulder, "Here's exactly what is wanted for your first opera costume!"

In spite of herself Phil gave a little delighted cry, the silvery satin ground was so rich and lustrous, the apple bloom strewn over it so perfect in line and color. She was sorry when the peddler said respectfully: "That, sir, is an ordered bit, so not for sale."

"Get another piece for your order; I'm bound to have this one," said Graham good humoredly.

The peddler shook his head. "There is not another piece like it," he said. "This was specially woven for a happy day gown."

"Who is to wear it?" Philomena asked softly, stifling a sigh. Somehow she found herself trembling, all her courage oozing away. She wished as she had never wished before that she had somebody of her very own to lean on. Her mother had died when she was born. Her father had gone away, disappeared, leaving her only a clouded name for heritage. She had never known until the trouble came; then Uncle John had spoken harsh truth. It was that, as much as love for the two dear old ladies, which kept her steadfast to the thought of going into the world and winning its applause.

She had never been curious or envious, but somehow there swelled in her a sense of passionate injury against the unknown who was to wear this happy day gown, ordered no doubt by a father's loving pride. She crushed the rich fabric between her fingers and fixed a long look upon the peddler's face.

"A girl is to wear it—that is, if she chooses," the peddler said, moving a step nearer.

Then she saw that he was more travel worn and weary than aged. Dimly, uncertainly, she saw, too, a likeness that drew her electrically to her feet. Through the open hall door her father's portrait showed in the bloom and strength of young manhood. She glanced from it to the peddler and back again, then stood white as death, facing him, too shaken to speak. His eyes followed hers and grew misty as he cried:

"Sisters! Daughter! So I have really kept my place! Philomena, my baby, the happy day gown was brought for you."

Greedy Animals.

It may be doubted whether those of us who are able to obtain sufficient food without difficulty can appreciate the craving for sustenance experienced by sea birds and other animals which have often by the force of circumstances to fast for long periods. Gulls will eat until they cannot fly and when they find pilchards on board a boat will continue their feast until they can only lie down and gasp. A superfluity of food comes at such long intervals that when it does come the avian intellect reels at the prospect, and what seems a horn of plenty brings dire disaster. Seeing that gulls and gannets know no better, we are not surprised to hear of a John Dory, stuffed to the very mouth, floating helplessly on the surface of the water, unable to escape from a flock of sea birds which have deprived it of its eyesight and will quickly take away its life.

A snake which thrusts its head through the palings to seize an unwary frog and finds itself unable to draw back again with the frog in its throat has wit enough to disgorge the amphibian and to deftly draw it through by the leg so as to swallow it on the safe side of the palings. But probably a snake which happened to be on the wrong side, in company with a frog, would consume it on the premises and so render itself incapable of wriggling through the bars.—Longman's.

Modest Charity.

They were discussing charity in the drawing room, and one of the gentlemen was inveighing with some sarcasm against benevolent folk who make donations and have their names published in the papers.

"Nearly all charitable acts," he said eloquently, "have pride or vanity as their motive. For my part I hate ostentation. I remember once when I was traveling through a part of the country where I was not known I came upon a lonely little station, where in the waiting room there was fastened to the wall a contribution box for the benefit of the sufferers through recent inundations.

"There was not a soul there, not a person in the neighborhood knew of my presence or was acquainted with my name, and I went and dropped a goldpiece into the box and slipped away unseen. Now, sir, what I contend is that my secret offering was a more meritorious one than if it had been made on a public subscription list with a loud flourish of trumpets."

"You are right," said a listener. "That was genuine modest charity, and I don't wonder you brag of it."

The Motion of a Swimming Fish.

One of the most recent applications of chrono photography—by which is meant photography applied by means of a series of short and rapid exposures to the representation of moving objects in successive positions—has been devised in France for the study of the swimming motions of fish. A rayfish was chosen as the subject of investigation, and the successive photographs were taken at intervals of one-tenth of a second. They show completely the movement of the fins and present a similarity to the photographs that have been obtained of the motions of the wings of a flying bird.

The swimming action begins with a lifting of the front part of the fin. This lifting motion runs rapidly backward along the fin, the front part being in the meantime depressed once more, and just before the motion ceases at the tail the movement recommences at the front end of the fin.

VERBAL ALIASES.

WORDS THAT GET TOO FAMILIAR TO SUIT SOME TASTES.

The Scientific Fad of Clothing Old Things in New Terms—Some Words the Meanings of Which Are Commonly Misunderstood.

When the report was recently circulated that a prominent public man had lost his life through accidentally inhaling a quantity of carbon dioxide, the man in the street began at once inquiring what carbon dioxide was.

As a matter of fact, carbon dioxide is merely another name for carbonic acid gas, one of the products of combustion and a constituent of atmospheric air.

Carbonic acid gas is known by several different names, as, for instance, carbon dioxide, carbonic oxide and carbonic anhydride.

Consumption as a name for a terrible and widespread disease is known and understood by practically every man, woman and child in England. But the medical fraternity, ever on the lookout for something new in the way of professional nomenclature, elected some years back to call it phthisis, and then just when that unappealing word began to be known and recognized they evolved yet another—tuberculosis.

And as with consumption so with most other complaints. A quarter of a century ago even eminent physicians were content to speak of smallpox, of typhoid fever, of lockjaw. Today they are called variola, enteric and tetanus respectively.

A doctor when giving evidence before an ignorant east end jury the other day said that the immediate cause of death was "a violent and prolonged fit of combined epistaxis and stomatorrhagia." It would, one would think, have been far easier for him to have spoken of a bleeding at the nose and mouth, and he would at all events have had the satisfaction of making himself understood.

Most people now living can remember the time when bacteria were known generally as animalcules—a not very strictly scientific definition, perhaps, but one easily understandable, and conveying, moreover, a distinct idea to any one of ordinary education and intelligence.

For that very reason, doubtless, the title in question was voted out of date and old fashioned and the word "bacteria" was substituted. This means, literally, "little sticks," certainly a most novel definition, but one that scarcely strikes the average lay mind as being either lucid or suitable. Nevertheless, it was accepted, and at last became familiar to the man in the street.

That of course could not be tolerated. Imagine a bacteriologist using a word which conveyed any meaning to anybody outside his own charmed circle! The idea is both degrading and preposterous; so he set to work forthwith and invented a whole host of terrible verbal aliases.

He called them for example, schizomycetes, neuromuskelzellen, megacocci and polymorphonuclear leucocytes, as well as half a hundred other things; while for the chemical substances incidental to the science he invented such delightful terms as "tetrahydroparamethoxyquinoline" and "tetramethyldiamido-triphenyl-carbinol-oxalate."

The craze, too, is getting commoner among other than scientists. Take the word "reeking," for instance, and ask your friends what they understand by it. "Reeking?" one will say. "Why, reeking means dripping with moisture, soaked with wet." You will derive some amusement from his surprise when you tell him that reeking means "smoking, steaming." A chimney can reek. When a horse reeks with moisture, it is because its flanks smoke and steam.

The change from the real meaning to that given it in popular, present day phraseology can easily be traced. Anything very wet will reek in frosty weather; so the wetness has been assumed to be the real characteristic of reek.

Then there is "lurid," which nine people out of ten use in an entirely wrong sense. Ask a man what color lurid is, and he may answer correctly, but the chances are that he will say, "Red flame, orange or bright yellow." Of course, lurid means smoky or dull color. London fog is lurid. Thick, suffocating smoke is lurid.

Lurid and livid are almost synonymous. Lurid flames are flames choked and hidden by smoke. A lurid sunset is not a brilliant one, but one dull and gray and cheerless.

Of course, the use of verbal aliases is not an absolutely new departure. It is only that we of this generation in our wild strivings after novelty have so enormously increased and multiplied them. The taste of our grandfathers and great-grandfathers lay rather in the direction of using over and over again two or three long and uncommon words.

Thus honorificabilitudinitatibus, as a synonym of fame, eminence, occurs and recurs with almost depressing regularity in the plays of old pre-Elizabethan dramatists and is even used by Shakespeare on occasion.

It was partly in ridicule of the silly custom of using this and other similar idiotic verbal doubles, which had survived in part even until his time, that Rabelais makes Pantagruel speak of "mbramborizeverzengirzequoemorgaschacheveznemafrettredding my poor eye" and ask angrily of Mr. Mauhound whether it was not enough to have "morcrocatebezasteverestegriglogocopamdrillated us all in our upper members, but you must also apply morderegripplatabrofreluchamburdurecaquelurintimpanibus to our shinbones?"—London Tit-Bits.

CRUSHING A BORE.

The Authority on Natural History That Sydney Smith Quoted.

Sydney Smith jokes have a delicate flavor of age, but an anecdote in "Memories of Half a Century" has not been told so often as some of the classic tales. Sydney was a guest at the dinner of an archdeacon, and a fellow guest, whose hobby was natural history, was a bore if once started on his subject. Smith promised to try to keep him in check. The naturalist got his opening.

"Mr. Archdeacon," said he, "have you seen the pamphlet written by my friend, Professor Dickenson, on the remarkable size of the eye in a common house fly?"

The archdeacon courteously said he had not. The bore pursued his advantage:

"I can assure you it is a most interesting pamphlet, setting forth particulars hitherto unobserved as to the unusual size of that eye."

"I deny the fact!" said a voice from the other end of the table. All smiled save the bore.

"You deny the fact, sir?" said he. "May I ask on what authority you condemn the investigations of my most learned friend?"

"I deny the fact," replied Smith, "and I base my denial on evidence wedded to immortal verse well known to every scholar at least at this table!"

The emphasis laid on scholar nettled the naturalist by its implication. "Well, sir," he said, "will you have the kindness to quote your authority?"

"I will, sir. The evidence is those well known, I may say immortal, lines: 'Who saw him die?' 'I saw him die.' 'With my little eye.'"

The guests roared, and during the rest of the dinner nothing further was heard on the subject of natural history.

THE COOKBOOK.

Peeled, chopped tomato sprinkled over lettuce, the whole covered with French dressing, makes a Russian salad.

To steam potatoes peel them and when very clean put them in a colander over boiling water. Cover tightly with a lid and leave them until done.

Tarragon leaves are most useful in salad and should be scalded, squeezed in a towel and chopped fine. This herb gives a zest to the salad that is always appreciated.

When making beef tea, never add the salt till the meat has been cooking for several hours. Salt acts upon the fiber and prevents it giving out all its nourishing properties.

A steak one inch thick requires to be broiled seven minutes; one inch and a half, twelve minutes; two inches, twenty minutes, near the fire at first and then four inches away.

A substitute for caper sauce is made by boiling some sprigs of parsley slowly to let it become a bad color. Do not chop it fine. Set it in melted butter, season with salt and a dessertspoonful of vinegar, boil up and serve.

A New Profession.

Young Mr. Inswim was hurrying blindly along the street toward a chemist's with a bottle in his hand when young De Trop hailed him.

De Trop—Hello, Inswim! I've scarcely seen you for a year. Where have you been keeping yourself since you were married?

Inswim—Oh, busy—busy all the time. De Trop—I say, what are you doing mostly?

Inswim—I've got a new profession. De Trop—What is it?

Inswim—Humorist. De Trop—You don't say. I didn't think you were much in that line.

Inswim—I'm not a very glittering success. De Trop—What—er—what sort of work do you do mostly?

And then young Mr. Inswim leaned over and whispered softly in young De Trop's ear:

"I'm spending most of my time trying to humor a baby that's engaged in tooth culture."

Then he plunged madly on again toward the soothing sirup shop.—London Answers.

The Expense of Canary Birds.

The keeping of canaries seems to be a fairly expensive luxury. To start with, a really good bird will cost $50. You can easily spend more, but $50 will buy a fairly good Norwich breed bird. The food the bird requires consists of various delicacies in the form of rye, bread, rice, meal and vegetables.

Canaries are liable to all sorts of ailments, and this, of course, necessitates further expense, for the treatment of these complaints is anything but cheap. Of course, no fancier of canaries would be content with one bird; he must have at least a dozen, and the cost of some of these will certainly run to $75. Fifteen hundred dollars per annum could easily be spent in this manner without a very big show for the money.—London Tatler.

On a Shelf.

"Mamma," asked little three-year-old Margie, "do people go to heaven when they die?"

"Yes, dear, if they are good," replied her mother.

"Then I guess grandpa wasn't any good," rejoined the little miss, "cause when he died they just put him on a shelf in a big stone house and locked the door."—Chicago News.

A Business Man's Tribute.

"You admire that musician?" "Very much," answered Mr. Cumrox.

"For his compositions or for his performances?"

"Neither. For his nerve in charging $5 a seat."—Washington Star.

THE FOXBORO HOSPITAL.

Perhaps our readers may not be familiar with the institution at Foxboro, for men afflicted with dipsomania, and the efforts there being made to rescue them from an overmastering appetite.

The following extract from the Cambridge Chronicle, gives a slight idea of the varied callings of the men who are being treated here, and the poem annexed, by a citizen of our own town, indicates the capacity of some of the patients who are at present in the institution.

Following are the extracts:— "We have here old soldiers of long and commendable service in the Civil war, officers who served with Custer and Reno in the Sitting Bull Indian wars, also young soldiers of the Spanish and Philippine wars; we have physicians, veterinary surgeons, dentists, carpenters, builders, drummers, electrical engineers, book-binders, printers, cylinder pressmen, undertakers, editors, reporters, shoemakers, painters, cobblers, lawyers, salesmen, book-keepers, liquor saloon owners, merchants, bartenders, farmers, cooks, coachmen, railroad men, waiters, musicians of various kinds, piano tuners, florists, sailors, both plain and tattooed, surgical instrument makers, ex-policemen, ex-officers of city fire departments, barbers, surveyors, bakers, poets, plumbers, gas fitters, librarians, real estate and insurance agents, slaters, farmers, tailors, jewelers, bull pushers, cow punchers, track drivers and jockeys. Each of the above callings has at least one representative here and many have several.

While all are at present, perhaps, to be classed but as broken down "has-beens," the greater proportion are living and much alive "may bes" and have "go" enough in them to yet achieve more or less brilliant worldly successes if opportunity shall not be wholly lacking when their will power shall have gained the strength to forever overthrow the king who has ruled their recent past.

The following Christmas greeting is prepared by one of our poets, a "patient," and one of us "degenerates." Copies are to be distributed to those patients who may desire to send it to some friend as a remembrance. Its publication may prove to your readers that Christmas and its hallowed thoughts are as dear to the men, old and young, at Foxboro, as to those who will enjoy the day in the charming home circle with friends and family about them."

CHRISTMAS 1902 GREETING.

By John Stevens, Foxboro, Mass., Dec. 25, 1902.

Awake from your slumber, child of woe!
The hour of rejoicing has come at last;
Behold in the east, a ruddy glow!
The day is at hand, the night is past.
Cease your repining! Away with care!
Let your soul rejoice on this Christmas morn.

In your heart a dwelling place prepare,
For the gift from God which to thee is borne.

Never, again, need your soul be chill'd
By the piercing blasts of a sinful world.
The promise of God has been fulfilled;
The banner of truth has been unfurled.
Salvation and peace, at last draw near;
The star of our hope lights the distant skies.

Today, in Bethlehem of Judea,
The Lamb has been born for the sacrifice.

Down from on high with consuming love,
In meekness and pity He wends His way;
Not to return to His realms above
Until our sins have been wash'd away.
Shout! and give praise to the new-born King!

On His head place the royal diadem,
Welcome the message the Saviour brings,
For He comes to redeem and not condemn.

Oh! what rejoicing in heav'n there'll be,
When the angels gather about the throne—
In honor of Christ's nativity—
Proclaiming to sinners a welcome home.
His birth, salvation for all provides;
His blood makes us heirs to heaven again.
May the love that in His law abides,
Forevermore rule in the hearts of men.

Fairy Story From Chicago.

A dignified matron called at a newspaper office the other morning and asked:

"Is the editor in?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered a man sitting at a table.

"You had an account in your society column this morning," she said, "of a reception last evening at Mrs. Perrycord's."

"I believe we had."

"I know you had. I am Mrs. Perrycord. I have called to thank you for the excellent manner in which it was written up. There was not a single mis-statement in it, from first to last. You had the name of every person who was present. Every name was spelled correctly, except one or two, and it was our mistake that you had those wrong. I wish you to know that we appreciate all this, and that I have no fault whatever to find—"

MISS McCracken's NEW ARTICLES.

Miss Elizabeth McCracken who is becoming most favorably known as a writer, notably on dramatic subjects, in the Atlantic and other publications, is soon to publish in Outing a series of from twelve to fourteen articles dealing with American themes, for which she is now gathering the material.

Miss McCracken is a western-born girl who makes her home in Arlington. She has lately been spending several weeks in travel, principally in New York. After Christmas which she passed at her home here she will leave for a longer tour, which will include all the prominent sections of the country.

Miss McCracken is a prominent member of the New England Women's Press Association, and her friends here are rejoicing in her success.

Labor Column

Edited by Joseph E. Crandell.

The International Typographical Union issued twenty new charters during October.

The Waltham C. L. U. meets next Wednesday evening, as usual.

The plumbers of Newton have organized, and a strong union of that craft is the result.

A movement is on foot to organize the city departments of Newton and Waltham into a union, chartered under the A. F. of L.

Glovemakers are to have an international union, 41 cities being represented at the meeting at Washington, last week, to start the movement.

Canada's compensation act gives full rights to the workman to sue and collect, and is said to be better for the workers than any law in the United States.

Union men should do their duty toward organized labor by seeing that everything they buy bears the label.

Journeyman Stonecutters' Association of America, which claims to be the oldest labor organization, has submitted a proposition to affiliate with the A. F. of L. to referendum vote.

Chorus girls are talking of organizing to obtain higher salaries. They claim the large theatrical managers have reduced wages the past two years.

The order of railroad telegraphers gained 10,807 new members for the first eleven months of 1902.

The Cincinnati school teachers are also organizing, following in the footsteps of Chicago and New York. Where does Boston come in?

The Chicago American says the printers' roller-makers of that city have organized, and will be chartered by the International Printing Pressmen's Union.

The Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ Company, of Boston, Mass., has decided to keep pace with Time's progress by introducing the nine-hour work day in their factory. By order of the president, E. P. Mason, the hours of work were reduced from ten to nine per day, with same pay. This act was voluntary on the part of the company.

Rubber Workers' Union, 8622, of Cambridge and Watertown, has surrendered its charter to the A. F. of L. and has become affiliated with the Amalgamated Union of Rubber Workers of Boston; its charter number is 3.

The Barbers' Union of Cambridge has a membership of 86, and only organized a short time at that. If the barbers of Waltham, Watertown and Newton would get together they could certainly outdo the Cambridge union.

Threatened with a general strike on all its lines, involving about 77,000 men, the Baltimore & Ohio railroad officials met and announced that a scale equalizing wages throughout the system, is being prepared. The difference was the cause of complaint.

It is said that the railway clerks association, which rejected an offer of the A. F. of L. for affiliation, now wishes to be allied. Being government employees, the A. F. of L. can look after their interests before Congress, which President Roosevelt's order prevents them from doing themselves.

The Flint glass workers' union voted to withdraw from the A. F. of L., on account of the jurisdiction squabble with the bottle blowers. Since then it has made a proposition to amalgamate, and the entire question will probably be speedily settled.

John Blue, president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, is organizing an International Union of Book Agents. "We have tried the union and know what it will do for us," says Mr. Blue. "Two years ago, when we formed an organization in Indianapolis, book agents were not treated as human beings. Today we are receiving five per cent higher wages and are treated fairly."

Another trust has sprung into existence; this time it is a laundry trust, and includes twenty-seven laundries of Boston and the surrounding towns. They claim that it is necessary to raise the price of work as the cost of materials used in the laundry have increased. On the other hand, the laundry workers have not received an increase in wages, and in many cases wages are being reduced. There is one remedy for the workers, and that is to form a union of laundry workers. Information in regard to a union of this staff will be furnished by addressing P. O. Box 122, Waltham.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The Castle Square theatre management announce A. C. Gunter's merry play in four acts, "Prince Karl," as the attraction at this house next week. The presentations of this play have, heretofore, been restricted to the appearances of Mr. Richard Mansfield in the title part, and much interest will attach to the impersonation by Mr. John Craig in the Castle Square production. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

Visitor—"Do you love your dollies?" Little Edith—"Oh, yes; I tell them that they are their mother's own darling babies, and that they mustn't be naughty or tear their clothes, and all that, you know. And then I put them to bed and say: 'Thank goodness, I can have a little peace now!' It is awful good fun, you know."

RETROSPECTION TRUST.

Another year gone! How quickly time flies! And we greet the New Year with solemn surprise.

As over the past one we thoughtfully look, Reading page after page, as if writ in a book.

Days fraught with pleasure, days full of pain; Days fraught with weariness—more loss than gain;

Days full of yearnings for things good and great; Days when we longed for a happier state.

Leaf after leaf we turn, of life's book, And o'er it we ponder and wonder, and look To see if one step we have gained through the year;

And find that, too often we've wandered through fear. But bright gleams the future! for surely we know That over earth's trials, and over earth's woe There rules a "Strong Hand" which is "Mighty to save;"

One which hath conquered both sin and the grave.

So trustfully lay we our hands in His own; Not fearing the future, because it is known By Him who hath loved us, and set us apart To serve Him and love Him, with mind, soul and heart.

JENNIE WILSON HOWELL.
Newton, New Year, 1903.

OVERHEARD ON FUEL QUESTION.

"See here! Don't you dare to send up any more soft coal at any price. Get some anthracite no matter what it cost. The smell and dirt are more than I can stand."

The above expresses the feeling caused by the varied experience with soft coal for domestic use.

Since the scarcity of coal began the coal teamster has risen in the estimation of the house-keepers in every community. One day recently, a teamster in relating his experiences said, "When coal is plenty I expect a 'kick' every morning some of them being very unreasonable, but since the coal famine, we are always welcomed very cordially, and I do not think people would object if we went across the parlor carpet with our boots on."

A gentleman of Watertown, in order to be certain that his fuel supply would last, recently purchased two tons of coal in Boston, supposed to be Pennsylvania anthracite, and paid $30, for the lot. Imagine his surprise and disgust when he arrived home and found that the city teams had been driven over his lawn in such a way as to cause great damage, the wheels sinking so deep that much of the load was thrown out to help extricate the carts, and that after all it was inferior grade of coal. If you wish to realize some of the difficulties of the coal situation, and are not suffering for coal yourself, just talk it over with this gentleman.

A BENEVOLENT OFFER.
WHICH IS OF GREAT INTEREST TO ALL SUFFERING WOMEN.

Mr. Editor:—I have learned of a very simple home treatment which is of interest to every suffering woman, as it will positively cure any case of leucorrhoea, painful periods, displacements or irregularities, and I would be pleased to have you inform your lady readers that I have decided to send it out free to all, as I feel it my duty to place it in the hands of every suffering woman. I had the pleasure of hearing from thousands of ladies in reply to my notice last year and I am now receiving many letters daily thanking me for the perfect health they have regained through my advice. I can refer almost any lady to some one in her locality who has been blessed by this treatment, and I hope all who are in need of such relief will write to me at once, for as I send this treatment free it will cost nothing to be convinced of its merits.

It should be in the hands of every suffering woman and all who wish the treatment should not delay, address at once,

MABEL E. RUSH,
Box 95, Joliet, Ill.

The publishers of this paper take pleasure in recommending that every woman who is in need of such treatment should avail herself of this offer at once, as certainly such a benevolent offer is worthy of attention.

LEXINGTON

THE PROPOSED STREET WIDENING.

Lexington people and more especially the people of North Lexington are very much in earnest about the boulevard which it was proposed to build, and for which a franchise was asked, but for which the petition was withdrawn.

They are not a little surprised at the action of the railroad people in withdrawing their petition and feel that if concessions are to be made while they are willing to meet the company half way, and do what is just and proper in order to have the line extended and double tracks laid, still they feel that double tracks are of as much consequence to the company in some respects as they are to the residents of Lexington. A brief review of the situation discloses these facts.

The company owns and operates one of the most beautiful and attractive pieces of property as a park, located anywhere in the vicinity of Boston.

The tract comprises some seventy acres and is rapidly becoming a favored resort for residents of all the surrounding towns. The people of Lexington argue, and justly so it seems to us that the proposed double track will not only be a benefit to our own citizens, but will be of a most distinct advantage to people of outlying towns.

And who is going to share in this added prosperity? Not only Lexington as a town, but the railroad people. As we have said before increased travel means increased profits for the railroad company.

It is not to be denied that the land adjoining the proposed new street, or more properly the widened street will increase in value and Lexington as a town must benefit. Already there are people waiting to build houses and improve property, and they simply state that they are waiting only for an established street line. We have no quarrel with the railroad people, but one's first duty is to Lexington and its people who support the paper.

The valuable franchises granted to street railroads are not duly appreciated by our citizens, and it is our plain duty to let the people know just what they yield to street railway companies, and it is also our duty to get every possible benefit in return for these privileges. The agitation has by no means died out, the embers are simply smoldering.

THREE REMARKABLE ARTICLES.

By an unintended coincidence three remarkable articles appear together in the McClure's magazine for December. One is a continuation of the history of the Standard Oil Company by Miss Ida Tarbell. Another is a review of the situation among the non-union miners in the anthracite region. The third entitled "The Shame of Minneapolis," is a terrible story of municipal corruption, and happily, of the redemption of a city.

These articles make a most valuable and impressive contribution to the present discussion of the relations between capital and labor, monopolists and the public.

Miss Tarbell's estimate of the character of the most conspicuous figure in the monstrous Oil monopoly strikes us as being both shrewd and just. It is keen, but it is not uncharitable. "Mr. Rockefeller" was good. There was no more faithful Baptist in Cleveland than he. Every enterprise of that church he supported liberally from his youth. He gave to its poor. He visited its sick. He wept with its suffering. He was simple and frugal in his habits. He never went to the theatre, never drank wine. He was a devoted husband, and he gave much time to the training of his children, seeking to develop in them his own habits of economy and of charity.

"Yet he was willing to strain every nerve to obtain for himself special and illegal privileges from the railroads which were bound to ruin every man in the oil business not sharing them with him. Religious emotion and sentiments of charity, propriety and self denial seem to have taken the place in him of notions of justice and regard for the rights of others."

We see illustrations and proof of this characterization in the selfish and relentless policy of the Standard Company, which in this time of pressure and distress raises without any just reason the price of oil. It is easy to make benevolent contributions out of millions made up of the pennies taken out of the pockets of the toiling and oftentimes suffering multitude.

But the people would rather do their own taxation, and select their own beneficiaries. If the control of the natural resources of coal and oil were in the hands of the people, selfish men would lose their opportunity to grow inordinately wealthy at the expense of others, and the state and the nation would have ample means to create and sustain educational and beneficent institutions, while at the same time every home would get at a fair price its fair measure of light and warmth.

Meanwhile we are not learning that "to obey is better than sacrifice." The only religion that is worth the name is the religion of righteous principle expressed in the practice of righteousness. Selfishness is wickedness, in whosoever and whosoever indulged. And no professions or emotions will make it anything else.

Mrs. George H. Streeter of Massachusetts avenue entertained her niece Miss Bennett of St. Johnsbury, Vt., this week.

The 6.17 train from Boston was late last Monday night, reaching Lexington an hour late. The cause of trouble was an engine off the track at Cambridge.

Lexington people are much exercised over the fact that they are obliged to pay $12.25 for Ohio block coal, and wonder why it is that car loads of hard coal pass through the town for points beyond here, and still this town has no hard coal.

The Lexington and Boston street railway have placed the latest and most improved cars on their Waltham line. The cars contain seats that face toward the front of the cars and are much appreciated by the patrons of the road.

George W. Sampson has just issued a notice of sale regarding the property known as the "Old Wellington place." It is easy to see the hand of the newspaper man in the description as it reads like a romance.

The Tourist club met at the home of Mrs. James Prince on Chandler street, last week and the following interesting papers were read: "Washington at Valley Forge" by Mrs. J. H. Willard, and "Social Life in Philadelphia During the Revolution" by Mrs. A. C. Washburne.

The large and commodious barn of the late Mr. Alderman, has been leased by W. T. Pierce of Boston, and already he has a string of blooded trotting stock, in winter quarters there. It is the intention of Mr. Pierce to turn out a stable of speedy ones in the spring, that will make the flyers on the trotting circuit go a bit if they want to save records.

Henry W. Savage has sold for Ellen B. Lane her property, situated on Parke street, Lexington, consisting of a nine room house, together with 30,000 square feet of land, to Fred H. Talcott of Dorchester, who buys for occupancy. The property is assessed for $4900.

The home of Mrs. H. A. C. Woodward in Clark street, was the scene of a very pleasant musicale, one evening last week, when Phillip E. Perry, a teacher in the High School, received a few of his friends. Among those who contributed to the pleasure of the evening, were Miss Marion Woodward, Miss Bertha Redman, Arthur Turner and Lester Redman. Mr. Perry also gave some excellent piano selections.

Lieut. Col. William Capelle who boasts Lexington as his birth-place, has just had his picture painted by the celebrated artist, Walter Gilman Page. Col. Capelle was born in Lexington, Feb. 10, 1833, and from his youth, has been connected with military affairs.

He joined the Roxbury Artillery in 1854 and soon became a member of Gov. Andrew's staff.

At various times he was an officer on the staff of Governors Bullock, Claflin, Walcott and Crane, and he was recently appointed on the staff of Gov. Bates, with the title of Assistant Adjutant General. Col. Capelle is a brother of Jonas Capelle, a hero of the civil war, and also a former citizen of Lexington.

HEMPLE QUOIN.

During my brief life I have been interested in politics to some extent, in fact so much so, that I have been known by that much abused and misunderstood characterization, as a politician.—It is not my purpose to enter into any lengthy discussion, or even defence of the man, who simply because he has the interest and welfare of his community at heart, and is active in carrying out his ideas, becomes known as a politician. He is generally pictured as a most selfish human being, who dictates to a lot of intelligent people how they shall vote, and for his devotion to duty pockets large sums of money, from sources that never exist. Dear reader, that is not my intention, but I wish to explain to the readers of the Enterprise, that after having had experience in a few large cities, and a number of very active small towns, I was obliged to come to staid old Lexington, to meet the man, who not only literally, but practically "carried the voters in his pocket." I had often heard the expression, "he carries the town in his pocket," but after many futile attempts I was obliged to give up trying to find a tailor who could build me a suit of clothes, in which were pockets capable of doing the much desired work. But right here in Lexington, in this quiet, staid and historic old battle ground, I ran across a man who did carry the town in his pocket. I had occasion to look up the address of one of our citizens, and not having a voting list handy, made known my predicament. The aforesaid gentleman immediately offered to supply the information, and putting his hand in one of his pockets, produced a small book with the entire voting list compactly made up. I thanked him for his assistance, and feel compelled to take off my hat to the only man, whom I have met in a long experience, who gave me an idea, as to just what it means to carry a town in your pocket.

THE BOSTON GLOBE'S

FREE SCHOOL.

It is not necessary to point out to the people of New England the importance of education. New Englanders have been leaders in every movement for the advancement of learning, and, therefore, should be expected to give enthusiastic welcome and hearty aid to the "Globe's School for Home Study," which will open Monday, Jan. 12, 1903.

It will be conducted within the columns of the Daily Globe by a staff of competent teachers. The most important branches of a common school, a high school, and a business education will be taught. The aim will be to help those who have had no opportunity to learn the rudimentary branches of a common school education and those whose common school education was not completed, as well as all readers of the Boston Daily Globe who wish to review the lessons of their school days. For more ambitious students special departments will be established.

The course for the present will embrace the following studies: "Penmanship," "English Composition," "History Questions," "Geography Questions," "The Best Books and How to Read Them."

Penmanship will be taught by means of diagrams and by pictures showing the proper position to take while writing.

The members of the teaching staff of the "Globe's School for Home Study" will cheerfully answer in the Daily Globe all questions coming within their respective departments.

How to form a library will be considered from the following points of view: A good library for a girl, a good library for a boy, the best 12 books, the best 25 books, the best 50 books, the best 100 books.

The average circulation of the Boston Daily Globe for the year 1902 was 196,579, of the Boston Sunday Globe, 276,296. Order your newswalker to deliver the Boston Daily and Sunday Globe regularly at your home.

PRESENTED WITH ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

The board of Fire engineers have received the following letter from Mr. Whiting which will explain itself.

Friend Taylor.

I enclose my check for one hundred dollars, and ask you to use it for the benefit of those firemen who did their best to save my house on the night of the 9th instant.

While the house was lost much of the furniture was saved, and saved in good condition.

I am happy to say for the benefit of the firemen and citizens that I never knew so many furnishings saved from fire, with so little injury.

While criticism is always to be expected, and I presume this occasion was no exception, to the rule, I am pleased to say that so far as I know, all was done to save the house that could be done, with conditions as they existed.

Wishing you a happy New Year,
I am very truly yours
G. O. Whiting.

Lexington Dec. 31, 1902.

WHY DON'T YOU LEARN SHORT-HAND?

Stenography is now so important a factor in business and affords so good a vocation that it will be interesting to note that the average time required last year to finish at the Hickox Shorthand School, Copley Square, Boston, was six and a half months. This is a brief time in which to thoroughly learn shorthand at a good school, for it must be borne in mind, this is the leading shorthand school in the country, and the standard of efficiency is higher there than elsewhere; still the cost is not excessive—$15 a month. In other words, smart young women or men at an outlay of about one hundred dollars can learn in half a year, and learn well, a business by which they can at once be sure of earning a good livelihood. The theory, 12 lessons, can be learned as well by mail as orally, the cost being $1 a lesson.

Little Alice had been put to bed and was saying her prayers. This was part of her petition: "O, God, make all the bad people good, and make all the good people—all the good people—the good people—nice!"

A REMARKABLE FLIGHT.

Police Officer Andrew Irwin has a fine flock of over sixty homing pigeons at his loft on Central street and takes no small amount of pride in his pets.

Last summer he entered seven of his birds in the old bird series of races for 1902 of the National Association of American Homing Pigeon Fanciers. The birds were shipped from Arlington on Thursday morning and on the following Sunday, June 22, were liberated at Aylmer, Ontario, Canada at 4.45 a. m. and at 2.45 the same day one was found in the loft on Central street, Arlington, and five others arrived during the day, the seventh arriving the next morning. The distance in an air line is 501 <sup>3</sup>/<sub>10</sub> miles and the average speed of the first bird 1463 <sup>1</sup>/<sub>10</sub> yards per minute.

Monday Mr. Irwin received from the headquarters of the Fanciers Association two beautiful diplomas for the records made by his star bird,—one for best flight in the Middlesex club contest against 74 birds started, 41 returned; the other a special diploma for best flight in the federation contest in which the number of birds started was in the thousands.

It may be said that such an achievement of the bird must have been tiresome and such contests cruel, but after a short while the bird showed no ill effect of this remarkable flight and it is certain the birds were not forced in the race, being left to the instincts of their own nature in promptly and swiftly returning to their own lofts.

QUITE A CYCLONE.

Lexington was visited by what had all the appearance of a cyclone, last Saturday morning, and during the half hour that it lasted, considerable damage was done.

The wind blew at a fearful rate and the rain fell in torrents, and for a short time the streets and low places about town were flooded. All over town trees were blown down, and in one place known as Brown's grove, no less than twelve large trees were uprooted.

Three chimneys were also blown down by the firmness of the gale, two of them being in the estates of Mr. Bliss and Mr. Bailey on Oakland street, and the other on the grounds of Mr. Patten on Bedford street.

It is also reported that a barn was blown down in Bedford, and the gale while it lasted, has never been equaled in Lexington for fierceness.

A strange thing in connection with the storm is that while surrounding towns, were visited by a considerable storm, still the hardest part of it seemed to vent its fury over Lexington.

YOUNG MEN'S LEAGUE ENTERTAINMENT.

On Monday evening, January 5, the Young Men's League of Arlington Heights came before the public for the second time with a first-class entertainment furnished by the Apollo Quartet of Boston in Town Hall. Mr. Arthur Perkins in his happy and congenial way spoke of the object and aim of the League, after which he introduced the Quartet and gracefully retired.

The Quartet at the beginning with the Trumpet Calls, sang themselves into the hearts of the people who manifested by recalling them, when many of the audience were carried away to former scenes of childhood by the artistic rendering of the "Old Oaken Bucket." Mr. Kendall in his rich tones gave, Phillips' "Song of the Desert," in a manner that called for unbounded applause to which he responded with the "Laughing Song." Like the benediction at the close of a summer's day; "The Sunset," by the Quartet brought a hush upon the audience. "If Ever," by Mr. Cole, playing his own accompaniment, was greatly appreciated by those present. The favorite of the evening was without a doubt Mr. Kendall who for the next forty-five minutes moved the audience at will from laughter to tears, with his silent Mr. Watkins he brought a familiar personage of every country town to the mind of the people. Then followed "Old Man and Jim," in Hoosier, dialect the rendering being worthy of a native of that state. His next selection was: "Called Down," a humorous sketch founded on the frivolities of a female college. It is certainly without exaggeration that this called down the house. Two encores were his tribute to the appreciation of the audience. Dennee's "Lullaby" by Mr. Spears in clear, bell like tones delighted all, responding to an encore he rendered a pleasing old Scotch selection. Several humorous selections followed which convulsed the audience.

Going from the ridiculous to the sublime, Mr. Kendall carried his hearers to the "7.30 Express," a descriptive piece of an old ex-slave's devotion to his former master. The pathos touched the heart and prepared the way for the final number, Rosenwigs, "Sleep in Peace," by the Quartet.

It is safe to say that no entertainment heard in Town Hall for some time had surpassed the one of Monday night.

The Apollo Quartet is composed as follows: E. M. Spear, first tenor; A. F. Cole, second tenor; F. E. Kendall, baritone; G. A. Bunton, basso; Mr. Kendall, impersonator.

The ushers were Messrs. Scott, Neely, Oliver White, Burton Savage and Alex Livingstone.

Jones—"Brown is an unlucky dog."
Smith—"How's that?"
Jones—"His object in marrying was to get out of a boarding-house."
Smith—"Well?"
Jones—"Now his wife is running one to support the family."

"Grandpa, how old are you?"
"I am eighty-seven years old, my little dear."

"Then you was born eighty years before I was."

"Yes, my little girl."

"What a long time you had alone waiting for me."

Little Girl—"Father, what is my birthday book about?"

Father—"It is called 'The Sleeping Beauty,' and is about a girl who slept, and slept, and nobody could wake her."

Little girl—"Was she a servant girl?"

Considerate little girl—"Please, Mr. Keeper, will it hurt the elephant if I give him a currant out of my bun?"

The Observer

I had the pleasure of attending recently a lecture which was illustrated by reproductions of paintings of the old masters. The audience was a mixed attendance of adults and children and while to the older and matured mind the lecture was very interesting it must have been a very dry subject to the little ones, and most naturally caused me to mentally ask myself to find a reason why so many public speakers forget and ignore the character of their audience and cling to the stereotyped phraseology of their discourse like barnacles to a ship's bottom, heedless of the unreasonableness and impatience of a large part of their audience. My theory is that many accustomed to speaking to a certain class cannot adapt their discourse to another class especially the children, in a manner that will interest and hold their attention.

I had the pleasure of examining an old book recently which the owner keeps with mingled joy and pride as a souvenir of boyhood days. The book is entitled History of Constantine and Pulchra, printed in Boston in 1821 and was presented by Abel Rice an old school master, late of Newton, to Mr. Isaac L. Watts of Arlington Heights. It is inscribed "First Premium Class 5. Presented for Superior Scholarship, Aug. 28, 1831." Mr. Watts was but six years of age at the time, but has kept this prize with great care and becoming grace, and exhibits this trophy of boyhood excellence with the enthusiasm of the age at which he received it.

A writer in the Boston Courier pays a deserving complement to our representative in the legislature.

Arlington and Lexington have shown good judgement in electing E. C. Stone to represent the two historic towns in the legislature. When I think of the brilliant young lawyer as I saw him by the roaring Genesee river and by the strand of Lake Erie, at Crystal Beach, it seems strange to think of him in the dim and somewhat supernatural light of the Massachusetts hall of representatives. However, I believe he is just the sort of a young man needed in politics in these days of changed conditions.

No Red Tape in This.

On June 14, a well-known gentleman of Lexington, Mass., fell from a Motor Cycle and received injuries which laid him up for a few days.

He was insured against accident in the but forgot to put in a claim until August 30. Technically he could not have collected anything on account of the lapse of time as all accidents should be reported promptly. The Company, however, is not built that way. They paid the claim without a murmur.

No Company can do business with you unless they are broad gauge, and this Company not only fills the bill in that but in all other respects. If you are going on a journey I can sell you a short policy for 30c. per day, carrying $5000 in case of death. I have many other splendid propositions in accident insurance. Come in and see them.
